Castro Regime Moves Against Enemies

Gives Death Sentences To Four Cubans, Sends Fresh Troops Into Central Cuba

HAVANA (AP) — The Castro regime struck three hard blows at its enemies Saturday — condemning civilian plane hijackers, moving troops against insurgents in the mountains, and lashing at discontented labor unionists.

Four Cubans were sentenced to death before a firing squad for trying to seize a Cuban airliner high above Cienfuegos. A fifth was captured as the others were on trial. He faces the same fate.

The government sent fresh troops into central Cuba's Escambray Mountains in a new effort to smash insurgents operating there.

And the Cuban Confederation of Labor, powerful leftist group, readied a new battle to oust directors of the strong Electrical Workers Union in Havana for failing to follow the set policy line.

A military court in Santa Clara deliberated less than an hour, then ordered four men lined up and shot for trying to divert a domestic flight Thursday night toward the United States. The pilot resisted and crash-landed his Cubana Air Lines plane with 17 aboard, despite his own wounds.

Caridad Calvera, a woman tried in the plot, was sentenced to 30 years in prison. Another woman, Caridad Torrado, was absolved by the court of young army lieutenants.

The four doomed men — Cesar Villareal, Raul Puian, Enilio Moreno and his brother Amilo—once belonged to ousted President Fulgencio Batista's armed forces.

The fifth man escaped through sugar cane fields once the plane was down, but officials said he was captured Saturday hiding in the Cienfuegos countryside, wounded slightly and weak from exhaustion. The man, Diosdado Martinez, was reported brought to Santa Clara for immediate trial.

Those on trial were convicted of smuggling aboard the plane the weapons they used in their vain hijacking attempt. One passenger was killed and three crewmen were wounded. The woman who was freed insisted she had joined the plotters only so she could marry one of the men. The court gave her $10 in pesos to get to Havana, the destination of Thursday's interrupted flight.

RIOT GREETS DEGAULLE — Rioters throw stones at military vehicles when tanks and troops were called out to help security police cope with thousands of young rightwingers who rioted in Oran, Algeria, as French President De Gaulle arrived in Algeria. The protest riots came as De Gaulle arrived to try to convince the military to go along with his plan to loosen Algeria's ties to France. (NEA Telephoto)

Lumumba Backer Recoils In Face Of U.N. Firmness

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP) — The white population of Stanleyville received a reprieve Saturday from death threats pronounced by provincial dictator Bernard Salumu, a backer of imprisoned ex-Premier Patrice Lumumba.

Faced with new and unexpected United Nations firmness, Salumu recoiled from the reprisal program by which he hoped to obtain Lumumba's freedom.

Twenty-four hours after Salumu's ultimatum expired Lumumba remained in solitary confinement in a Thysville army prison. And no whites had been arrested in Stanleyville. Salumu had threatened to rope in all the estimated 2,000 whites in Oriental Province and "start by cutting off the heads of some of them" unless Lumumba was freed.

With the full backing of U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold, Gen. Mengasha Iyassu, Ethiopian chief of staff of the U.N. force, firmly told Salumu the United Nations would not tolerate the threatened reprisals.

For the first time since the beginning of the U.N. Congo operation, the 1,800-man Ethiopian contingent in Oriental Province took firm action against the Red-tinged local dictatorship and the military police unit supporting it.

The Ethiopians took over a

Bomber Crashes; Find 5 Airmen, Seek 3 Others

PLATTSBURGH, N. Y. (AP) — Five crewmen who parachuted from a B52 jet bomber were found safe Saturday and hope remained that the more than 300 searchers would rescue the other three.

The bomber, from Westover Air Force Base, Mass., crashed in flames Friday night near Barre, Vt., about 100 miles from where the men were found.

Still missing were Lt. George M. Davis of Pawtucket, R. I., the electronic warfare officer, Staff Sgt. Pierre Maheux of Auburn, Maine, the gunner, and Airman 1.C. Charles E. Morris, 32, of Clearwater, Fla.

The latest to be found were Maj. Henry Luscomb of Simsbury, Conn., who landed near Crown Point and Lt. James Saravo, the copilot, who landed near Schroon Lake.

Earlier in the day, Maj. Karl E. Keyes, 43, radar navigator from Hyattsville, Md., reported, followed several hours later by Capt. William T. Combs, 43, pilot from Bristol, Va., and Capt. Ronald D. Little, 29, navigator from Altoona, Pa.

Keyes who suffered broken ribs and other injuries, was reported in good condition. Combs suffered minor injuries but was reported in fine condition. Little suffered shoulder and arm injuries.

All were taken to the Plattsburgh Air Force Base hospital.

The jet bomber was in flames as it crashed and exploded on a lonely farm near Barre.

No bodies were found in the wreckage.

Officials at Westover AFB said the plane, attached to its 99th Bomb Wing, was on a night-training mission. They emphasized it was not carrying nuclear weapons.

State Electoral Board To Receive GOP Complaints

CHICAGO (AP) — Republicans, buoyed by claims that Vice President Richard M. Nixon gained 5,528 votes in a ballot recheck, prepared Saturday to carry complaints of voting irregularity to the Illinois Electoral Board.

The new figure still fell short of what Republicans would need to overcome President-elect John F. Kennedy's 8,849-vote victory in Illinois. But it also was considerably higher than official recheck figures released Friday.

George S. H. Dapples, attorney for the Nixon Recount Committee, said he would take complaints of voting irregularities to the State Electoral Board when it reconvenes in Springfield Wednesday. He said he hopes the board will order withholding the state's 27 electoral votes from Kennedy.

Republicans also claimed the recheck of 863 paper ballot precincts in Cook County gave Benjamin Adamowski, state's attorney who lost to Democrat Daniel P Ward by 26,000 votes, a gain of 16,618 votes.

A representative for Adamowski, Elroy C. Sandquist Jr., said Adamowski would sue for formal recount next week.

Hint Kennedy To Ask Republicans To Be On Cabinet

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy got on the telephone Saturday for more work on selection of his Cabinet, amid reports he may ask a Republican to be secretary of the treasury.

The Republican the reports centered on is C. Douglas Dillon, 51, who is undersecretary of State in the outgoing Eisenhower administration.

Kennedy's headquarters continued to decline comment on what it called speculation regarding Dillon, and there was the usual word of caution that all decisions are tentative until the president-elect announces his choices for positions in the new administration.

But Kennedy's press secretary, Pierre Salinger, disclosed that the president-elect had slipped away from his Georgetown home in

De Gaulle Continues Tour

Moslems, Settlers Clash In Algiers

ALGIERS (AP) — Moslem backers of President Charles de Gaulle surged in riotous demonstrations Saturday night through Algiers streets littered with the debris of two days of mob action by anti-Gaullist European settlers.

A force of between 2,000 and 3,000 North Africans marched on the European quarter in the first large-scale Arab demonstration in this territorial capital.

Pouring unexpectedly out of the silent casbah, they set fire to a gasoline station, sacked a department store, smashed shop windows on a march down the Rue de Lyon.

They swept through a barrage of flowerpots and other missiles hurled by Europeans from the windows of buildings lining the streets. Then, however, they met a detachment of riot police backed by grim-faced troops.

But thousands of reinforcements, led by a band of screaming women, headed in from the suburb of Salembier.

"Algeria is Algerian," cried these supporters of De Gaulle's self-determination policy and tossed in some anti-French slogans.

The cause of this outbreak was undetermined. One unconfirmed report said a European rightist had shot at a Moslem police officer.

The incident came just as the city seemed to be returning to quiet after the second day of European rioting against De Gaulle's Algerian visit.

It was officially estimated that a total of 400 police were injured in the rioting Friday and Saturday. Eleven of them were hospitalized. There was no estimate of the number of rioters injured, but the total was believed to be at least 400.

Moslems and settlers had clashed previously in Oran and Orleansville. But until Saturday afternoon Algiers' Moslem population had withdrawn into the narrow streets of the native quarter, while the city's European sector was paralyzed by

Stevenson Delays Decision About Accepting U. N. Post

CHICAGO (AP) — Adlai Stevenson said Saturday night, "I will do my duty," about acceptance or rejection of the United States ambassadorship to the United Nations.

Earlier, in New York, he had indicated he will not announce his decision whether to accept the U.N. job until the new secretary of state is named.

In a series of short exchanges with newsmen, upon arriving by plane in Chicago, Stevenson seemed to indicate that his delay is deciding upon the post is prompted by courtesy and protocol rather than possible objections to the man who will head the state department.

Stevenson was asked what he thought of four men who have been mentioned as possible candidates for secretary of state.

The names mentioned to him were those of David G. Bruce of Baltimore; Sen. J. W. Fulbright of Arkansas; Dean Rusk of the Rockefeller Foundation, and former Rep. Chester Bowles of Connecticut.

"I have no objections to any of these four. I regard them all very highly," Stevenson said.

Stevenson, talking in New York with newsmen before boarding the plane, was asked if he had made up his mind about accepting the U.N. post offered by President-elect John F. Kennedy.

"I will have to discuss it further with the president-elect and also with the secretary of state,"

Kennedy Family Clamps Down On Family News

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President-elect and Mrs. John F. Kennedy retreated to the privacy of an oceanfront family home and ordered a clampdown on family news Saturday.

There was a brief report from Kennedy's press secretary, Pierre Salinger, that Caroline Kennedy, 3, was introduced Friday night to her new brother, 15-day-old John F. Kennedy Jr.

Caroline, who was permitted to stay up late for this big event and also the arrival of her parents-patted baby John on the head, according to her nurse, Miss Maude Shaw.

The Kennedys are established in the large and comfortable, two-story hollow tile and stucco home of Kennedy's father, Joseph P. Kennedy, former ambassador to England. It is complete with swimming pool and tennis court.

Their activities while there will be no reports at all of Mrs. Kennedy's doings or those of her children. The Kennedys want their private life to be private, Salinger explained. And, he told reporters, "You might as well get used to it."

But, he indicated that Joseph Kennedy and his wife, Rose, who has not yet seen her 18th grandchild, may arrive in time for the Christmas holiday.

Mrs. Kennedy, recuperating after the birth of her son Nov. 25, is expected to stay in Palm Beach even after the Christmas and New Year holidays, although her husband will return to Washington.

Ships Damaged By Lake Storms Dock For Repairs

SAULT STE. Marie, Mich. (AP) — Two Great Lakes freighters, damaged in a heavy wind and snow storm on Lake Superior, were tied up in the Soo area Saturday for repairs.

The 250-foot Starbelle, which radioed a call for help Friday, was docked on the Canadian side for repair of a cracked hull and deck. She limped through the Soo locks at midnight escorted by two Coast Guard cutters.

The 660-foot John O. McKellar, owned by Scott Misener Steamships Ltd. of Fort Colborne, Ont., tied up at a dock here for repair of a cracked deck plate. The big freighter rode out Friday's storm without calling for help. She anchored overnight in Whitefish Bay

Was In Orbit Three Days, 48th Trip Around World

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A sharp-eyed Air Force pilot Saturday made his second straight aerial catch of a capsule ejected from an orbiting Discoverer satellite.

The 300-pound capsule, snagged at an altitude of 13,000 feet about 400 miles from Hawaii, contained precious radiation-testing and sky spy gear.

He had asked, and received, a particular spot in the formation of nine of the Flying Boxcars spread over the farflung "ball park"—the area where the capsule was expected to descend—of the Pacific. Officials here said they were not certain whether the Walla Walla, Wash., captain felt he "had it doped" just where the capsule would be sighted.

The capsule was in orbit, circling the earth every 94 minutes, for three days. Previous Discoverer capsules have been recovered after one or two days. Officials said the longer exposure to space radiation was expected to be of greater value to the nation's man-in-space program.

Contents include human eyelid tissue, blood and bone marrow. Also in the 27x33-inch capsule was secret equipment of a type which United States researchers hope will some day eliminate the possibility of sneak attack.

The biological specimens will be rushed to the School of Aviation Medicine at San Antonio, Tex., for study.

It was the fourth time a capsule has been discharged from a satellite in space and recovered by America's space researchers. Altogether, three Discoverer capsules have been snagged in the air, one fished from the ocean. Near misses were scored on two others.

"The entire operation of Discoverer XVIII was the most successful we have had in the Discoverer series," declared Maj. Gen. O. J. Ritland, commander of the Air Force Ballistic Missile Division.

"This was a precision operation from the very beginning. The timing and precision of the operation and the recovery after three days in orbit is very gratifying. Everything worked out to the split second."

Jones spotted the orange and silver parachute at 25,000 feet, northwest of Hawaii. He jockeyed for position with his plane equipped with two telescoping booms trailing below. Across the booms was a nylon rope with grappling hooks.

He snagged the capsule on the first pass, after it had fallen another 12,000 feet into his altitude range.

The capsule recovery was the completion of a performance started last Wednesday which thoroughly satisfied Air Force officials from start to finish.

The 2,100-pound satellite rocket was launched on a souped-up booster from Vandenberg AFB. It orbited in an egg-shaped pattern at 150 to 450 miles from the earth.

All went so well that the Air Force decided to leave the satellite in orbit an unprecedented three days before ejecting the capsule—the only part of the vehicle which will be recovered. It had traveled around the earth 48 times, covering 1.25 million miles

Leaderless Laos Wallows In Chaos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Gen. Sounthone Pathammavong, neutralist pulled from virtual retirement last month to lead the Laotian army, announced formation of a temporary military government Saturday as leaderless Laos headed toward chaos.

The capital here is without a government leader and is a city sought by political factions of every color, threatening armed conflict for its control.

Sounthone heads the military government of neutralist and leftist army officers. One of his first acts was to call a meeting of representatives of pro and anti-Communist forces, which face each other across a no-man's land at the city limits.

The meeting failed to materialize, however, because neither side showed up. Sounthone said he will keep trying to arrange a conference.

Vientiane is occupied by 500 or more men under Capt. Kong Le, who led the August coup that upset a pro-American government and installed a neutralist regime.

The neutralist premier, Prince Souvanna Phouma, is spending a quiet night 500 miles away in Phnom Penh, capital of neighboring Cambodia. He fled there Friday night by plane, along with some Cabinet and Parliament members, when any hope of bringing peace to his divided nation appeared doomed.

A communique was issued by the military government at noon

Negroes Picket Golf Club Where Ike Was Playing

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—About 60 Negroes picketed the swank Augusta National Golf Club while President Eisenhower played golf there Saturday.

White House press secretary James C. Hagerty said Eisenhower was unaware of their presence.

"I have no comment on it at all," Hagerty said. "I am not going to seek comment."

W. W. Bennett of the Georgia state patrol, who estimated the number of pickets at 60, said they included two members of the faculty of Paine College, coeducational Negro school.

Bennett said there were no disorders and that the pickets made no attempt to enter the club grounds, which are completely secluded from the street outside.

Hagerty said Secret Service agents on duty at the club also estimated the number of pickets at 60.

"I assume so," Hagerty replied when asked whether the pickets asked to see Eisenhower.

Hagerty said the Secret Service agents explained that the President doesn't have appointments while here for weekends.

Cpl. Bennett told newsmen the pickets walked back and forth on the highway in front of the club, and that some walked on the sidewalk across the street.

Another read: "Lincoln—Emancipation!!! Eisenhower — Civil Rights???"

Deputies at the scene said, "There were no incidents, no insults."

Kansas means "people of the south wind" in the Indian language.

Douglas Leads Drive To Pass Bill To Aid Depressed Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats are preparing a drive to try to pass a depressed areas bill early next year as the first major bill in the new administration.

Sen. Paul H. Douglas, D-Ill., who will be a key figure in the push, told a reporter Saturday he expects to be ready to introduce the legislation as soon as Congress meets Jan. 3.

President-elect John F. Kennedy has named Douglas head of a task force to work on the problem of aiding areas with chronic unemployment ills.

But, even more important from a legislative standpoint, the Illinois senator is chairman of the banking subcommittee which handles such measures and thus is in a position to move it promptly.

Some Democrats are hoping the bill can be given the coveted "S. 1" number to dramatize the importance the new administration gives to it.

They say it may well be possible to start it moving before John F. Kennedy is inaugurated as president Jan. 20. There will be no Democratic officials in executive departments to testify on it until after the inauguration, but a letter from the president-elect could be the vehicle for the views of his administration.

Douglas said he did not believe it would be necessary to hold any extensive hearings, since Congress had been looking closely at the problem for years.

The Illinois senator succeeded in winning passage of depressed areas measures in 1958 and 1960. But President Eisenhower killed both with vetoes.

Douglas presided at a meeting of his task force in Charleston, W. Va., Friday. Earlier in the week he held a private session in his Senate office to work out strategy with interested legislators and members of their staffs.

The senator said in the interview he believed first consideration should be given to a bill similar to the $389-billion measure which passed the Senate in the last Congress.

Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., who represents a state which hopes to benefit heavily from the legislation, said he agreed.

The bill killed by Eisenhower last session was a cut-down $251-million version written in the House and accepted by the Senate in an attempt to get something through.

Senate Democrats said they believe the House would be more willing to accept their measure this time since the administration would be giving it strong backing.

The bill will carry federal loan and grant funds to try to create new jobs in long-term depressed industrial and rural areas.

Towns with heavy unemployment because of the shutdown of coal mines and textile plants are examples of those the legislation seeks to help.

U.N. Steering Committee Votes 11-Week Recess

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—The U.N. Steering Committee Saturday voted an 11-week recess in the current General Assembly session. The long holiday break, beginning Dec. 20 and ending March 7, was a victory for the West.

The United States and other Western powers shoved it through the 21-nation committee over bitter Soviet opposition. The Soviet Union had demanded a short recess of from two to six weeks so that the resumed session might be concluded in February.

The decision still must be ratified by the 99-nation assembly itself, but there appeared little chance of a reversal.

Some Western delegates backed the long holiday as a cooling-off period in the tense cold war maneuvering. But it also was suggested as a measure to give the incoming U.S. administration of President-elect John F. Kennedy time to get the feel of things.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin made it clear that his government still was thinking of a special spring session of the assembly on disarmament, as proposed by Premier Khrushchev. Zorin even suggested this might be held in April or May.

The Sweet Smell of the Male

By WARD CANNEL
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Progress report. Just like everybody said, the American male has smashed sales records again in his rush to make himself smell.

According to early indications, this year men will have used $4 million more of perfume, cologne and other scents on themselves—a one-third increase over last year's increase and a four-fold jump over a decade ago.

"And the surface hasn't even been scratched yet," in the words of Fred Rowse. "Men haven't begun to buy what they're going to buy in scents."

Rowse is a scent inventor and vice president of Norda, one of the nation's leaders in the essential oil industry. He doesn't care what brand men buy, so long as they buy.

• • •

According to Rowse, the big breakthrough came right after World War II when men bought the big pitch for deodorants, namely: you can still be a human even if you don't smell like one.

After that it was all down hill. Scent inventors found that the traditional pine odor of men's toiletries could be replaced (as sales climbed) with the oriental smell of sandalwood, cloves, the smoky smell of birch tar, citrus-like bergamot, or—good grief—essence of rose.

Meanwhile according to marketing analysts, psychologists were at work in today's big area of research—packaging.

It had already been established that men buy their own essential scents (shaving cream, deodorant, etc.) while their wives buy the luxury fragrances (colognes, etc.). And so, in keeping with what psychologists had discovered after years of research, the containers that men buy were made short and squat, and the containers women buy were made tall and cylindrical.

• • •

Today, naturally, one higher priced line of men's toiletries, Citation House, is out to lure both men and women buyers with a short, squat bottle and a tall, cylindrical cap.

© 1960 by NEA, Inc.

"Can I use your bath oil tonight, Pop? She likes mature men."

At the same time, according to ace fragrance publicist Alma Morris, advertising has been reshaping the male mind.

Words like "bottle," "perfume," "dab-on" have been scrupulously replaced with "flash," "aroma," "splash-on." The proof of the putting: men's perfumes are being made to last longer—in some, a dab is fragrant all day.

And lest a fellow have a qualm as he splashes his aroma from his short, tall, squat, cylindrical flask, the industry has a battery of reassurances ready, one at least for every niggling fear. To wit:

Warrau Indian girls won't go out with a brave who hasn't rubbed himself with a dead fish. Eskimo men had better smell like rancid whale blubber or winter will be the loneliest night in the year. And how about Christopher Columbus? Why, he was on his way to a new route to the Orient so Europe could have spices to make the Middle Ages smell better.

• • •

For the psychiatrically oriented, the industry purrs that aroma, like the beard or various-colored vest, shirt and hat, is just another way of male self-assertation.

It all adds up to a $270 million market in scented shaving preparations and another $94 million in luxury fragrance items.

"Now the next step," says Gilman Rowse, "is to get them so they've got a certain, personal smell and they won't go out without it."

URGE POOL SAFETY

The National Swimming Pool Institute headquartered here says the backyard plunge needs fencing in and covered to provide a safety factor that is required by law in some areas.

The fences of hedges or walls and wire reduce wind velocity so that the pool area is warmer. Covers make it impossible for a wandering child to fall into a pool. It also prevents small wild animals from becoming trapped.

Chapin, Arenzville, Concord Unit Board Adopts School Plan

The Board of Education of Community Unit School District No. 27 (Chapin, Concord, Arenzville) with Principal, C. C. Barlow, and Superintendent, George L. Reed met in a special executive session in the School Board Office at Concord to further discuss and take action on recommendations and suggestions made by Dr. Olin Hilemen, Junior High School Consultant; Earl Hudson, Building Consultant; Denson Sprouse and Lem Holloway, General Supervisors; Olin W. Stead, Director, Division of Instructional Services; and Guy E. Cornwell, First Assistant of Public Instruction; all from the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, Springfield.

The Board of education voted unanimously to adopt the 6-3-3 plan becoming effective for the school year, 1961-62. The junior high school is to be located in the main building at Arenzville and the senior high school in the high school building at Chapin. Grades one through six are to attend the respective centers as of the present school year, Arenzville, Chapin, and Concord.

Recommendations in present facilities to make the change to the 6-3-3 pain are as follows:

A. Arenzville:

1. Cement block building be used for grades 1-2-3 with restrooms added in the first grade room.

2. Erect a partition in the study hall of the main building to make a classroom, and a library and study room.

3. Remove partition between bookkeeping room and typing room to make a larger classroom.

4. Band practice be conducted in home economics room provided there is no conflict with home economics. (There should be a storage cabinet for band instruments.)

B. CHAPIN:

1. Future building plans should include an area for industrial arts. Suggested recommendations for the development of the Junior High School Program of Education, Grades 7-8-9.

1. Plan for the basic academic areas or language arts, social studies, science, mathematics, physical-health education, vocal-instrumental music, and art.

2. Plan for the crafts, homemaking, foreign language, and typing programs.

No Major Building Program

Some advantages of the 6-3-3 plan:

1. A major building program is not recommended.

2. Present buildings will suffice except for an area for industrial arts.

3. Grades 1-2-3 be located in the building now occupied by grades 6-7-8.

4. Grades 4-5-6-7-8-9 be located in the main building.

5. A more gradual transition between elementary and senior high school program.

6. The community keeps its schools.

7. Home economics may be offered to junior high school students.

8. Foreign languages, arts and crafts may be offered to junior high and elementary grades.

9. A better senior high school program should be had.

10. Larger classes in the senior high school. Some classes now have four and five students.

11. Less duplication of classes.

12. More attractive to teachers.

13. Better opportunity to group students according to ability and interests.

14. Promote more unity in the district and schools.

15. Should receive more for each tax dollar spent.

16. Less duplication in books and equipment in the library and laboratory.

17. Will not need a cafeteria as recommeded at the high school building at Chapin.

Some parents have been concerned about transportation. We think that the pickup need not be any earlier nor the return home of students and later in the afternoon," the report said.

"If you have any questions, feel free to consult the board of education, the office of the school board and the superintendent. If you have a club or organization with which you wish the matter discussed, we will try to answer your questions," the report concluded.

Mao's Red China—Is It A Paper Dragon Or Growing Flesh And Blood Monster?

Editor's Note—Along with freedom, Communist China seems to have abolished love, substituting a constantly fanned hatred for its enemies. In the following story, based on fresh word from a recent traveler in Red China, a correspondent who has kept close tabs on developments there presents a revealing picture.

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP)—A decade ago Mao Tze-tung's newly created People's Republic of China threw its Red shadow across an alarmed Asia. Today, the lengthening shadow has crept half way across the earth to the Americas.

Despite the fact that his regime has been branded an outlaw for its aggression in Korea and against Tibet, Mao's ambassadors sit in chanceries from Baghdad to New Delhi, from newly independent Guinea to Afghanistan.

He has walked into the Americas by way of Fidel Castro's Cuba, 90 miles from the U.S. mainland.

And despite 10 years of bitter U. S. opposition, Mao stands at the threshold to the United Nations. The world's leaders conceded that a disarmament treaty without his assent would be little more than a scrap of paper.

In his 66th year, this round-faced, lofty-browed son of peasants has been raised by his Communist followers to the eminence of a demi-god. His words, actions and even his thoughts are holy writ for 650 million people.

The China he rules is fanned daily by hatred of a dozen different and terrifying kinds—hatred of the United States, hatred for rich landlords, for counter-revolutionaries, for Chiang Kai-shek, hatred for anyone who fails to conform.

"Hatred," said a traveler recently returned from Mao's China, "has become an institution, particularly hatred for the United States. It is horrible to see this vast human machinery run by only one fuel—hatred. If it used love, instead, it could become the most powerful nation on earth."

The catechism for the party faithful of Communia China is Mao's collected works. A fourth edition which appeared Oct. 1 has been quoted approvingly by Communist leaders in recent weeks. Unfortunately for the peace of mind of the West, the language is warlike.

"Politics," Mao said, "is war that sheds no blood while war is blood-shedding politics." In the next breath he adds, "We Communists are opposed to all kinds of unrighteous war that impedes progress toward communism but are not opposed to righteous wars that promote progress."

Coupled with this kind of talk, Peiping's propagandists boast of the rapid build-up of a national militia which they claim will put 200 million men under arms, and warn the United States that it will be crushed in any future war.

The image the world sees, the one Mao apparently wishes to project, is of a growing China, almost arrogantly unafraid of any enemy no matter how big.

But what is Mao's China, the human China really like?

A skilled observer who knows both people and politics made a first visit several weeks ago to the mainland.

"What struck me most," he said, "were the burned out, expressionless eyes. I have never seen so many empty eyes. When you see a million people with empty eyes——" He ended his sentence with a gesture.

Everywhere he went, he said, he found want, no actual starvation.

"In Shanghai, people were in rags. In Peiping, they had material goods, they were neatly dressed, but they were hungry. the distribution system had broken down. Drought, floods, typhoons and thunderstorms had hurt the harvest."

He found water rationed, electric power interrupted for long periods, elevators not running.

Houses were being built faster, bigger and more economically than ever before.

"They make things that look good but wash away with the first rain," said this European.

In the communes, he looked in vain for tractors or modern equipment. Instead, he found only the age-old plow, the water buffalo and, in one startling encounter, a massive Soviet tank being used to pull a small plow.

Over all, the commune leader and his book of meal tickets exercised discipline. No work, no ticket.

The only really happy people he observed were the Communist youth volunteers, swinging through the streets singing and shouting, or working stripped to the waist in the fields.

The farmers, he said, were lean, without an extra ounce of flesh to spare. Their food lacked vitamins and minerals. Nowhere in his travels did he come across a single bit of fresh fruit. All of it goes for export.

In Shanghai he arrived in time for the last day of "Hate America Week," was taken aback by three million marching people. Later, at a circus, the motif was anti-U.S. imperialism. A clown lifted his top hat and out fell a model of an atom bomb. Jugglers, disguised as wolves from Wall Street, were promptly dispatched by Chinese Volunteers.

He saw no violence, no major incidents. Everywhere there was an extraordinary display of honesty. Money mislaid was always returned.

But one of the saddest facts of Mao's China, he said, was the disappearance of love, love of all kinds, for wife, family or even family pets. "Love has been sanitarily abolished," he said. "There is no time for such nonsense. Nowhere did I see a single bird or pet. But also, there were no flies."

STARTS ROLLING YOUNG

VINELAND, N. J. (AP)— An attractive young mother with a yen to go roller skating has solved her baby-sitting problem. She doesn't hire one.

What's more, she lets the child skate. She's equipped him with special roller skates which enable him to glide around the floor, with a gentle assist from mother.

Reporter Acts As Guinea Pig In Test Of Mushrooms Producing Hallucinations

By RALPH DIGHTON

1. The scene was a sprawling, austerely white medical laboratory instead of a studio, and

2. I was gulping mushrooms, not martinis.

But I was higher than a kite in a 40-knot wind.

All, of course, in the interest of science.

Four human guinea pigs, including this writer, were taking part in a test of the effect of a new type of hallucination-producing mushrooms discovered by an expedition to the Oaxaca region of Mexico last summer.

The test was conducted at the San Fernando Valley plant of Riker Laboratories, Inc., which is interested in isolating the element in the mushroom which touches off these weird dreams.

The mushrooms may have possibilities in treatment of mental illness. Scientists figure that if they can cause aberrations, they may be able to cure them, too.

The sampling by newsmen kicked off an extensive test program.

On the day of the test I checked in at 10 a.m. for an examination which showed I was physically and mentally sound. At 11:45 a.m. Dr. Andrija Puharich, author of the book, "The Sacred Mushroom," administered the first dose.

He refused to identify the exact species of mushroom, saying amateurs trying to duplicate the experiment might get hold of a fatal variety.

This was a dried mushroom, about five inches tall, with a taste that can be described only as nutty—a word that also describes the way I was eventually to feel.

An hour later, however, I was still sober.

Dr. Jeffrey Smith, professor of philosophy at Stanford University and my "baby-sitter" during the experiment, seemed to believe I was resisting the drug, so I agreed to munch another mushroom.

I found I could stand up only as long as I kept my eyes open. One blink, and I was lost in a world of whirling colors and textures.

Magenta mountains melted into hibiscus petals, and the petals dissolved into a Niagara Falls of flowing diamonds.

I kept waiting for the pink elephants to come along and give my tired old bones a lift, but then I forgot about them in a red-and-gold oriental palace that faded into bright green snowflakes.

By this time Puharish, Smith and Dr. Barbara Brown of the Riker research staff were holding a news conference to announce the results, if any, of the experiment.

The mushroom is supposed to increase one's extrasensory perception—make you able to read minds and even enable your spirit to leave your body for faster-than-light trips around the universe.

Where I went I'll never know, but the things I saw were not of this world.

Once I saw a bridge of light, something like the Golden Gate Bridge at San Francisco except that the other end was not fastened in Marin County across the bay, but on a distant star.

I opened my eyes and came back to reality with the thought that science fiction writers must train on these mushrooms.

A press agent with the incredible name of Chief Samuelson had told me the experience would last only four hours and would be extremely pleasant. It didn't work out that way.

For nine hours every nerve in my body felt as if it had been clamped to an electric wire. From time to time I shook uncontrollably. Nausea came intermittently and my hands turned to ice.

However, the mushrooms did produce hallucinations — although I imagine you could get the same effect with a rubber mallett—and apparently did increase extrasensory perception.

Before eating the first mushroom, I sat at a computer trying to guess what random numbers it had printed on a machine behind me and out of my sight.

A. L. Kitselman of the Institute of Integration at La Jolla, Calif., was seated at this machine and was reading the numbers silently.

Thirty minutes after eating the second mushroom, I tried again. This time I scored 28 hits out of 99—double my earlier score.

Kitselman said pure chance would have given me 11 hits each time.

The other three guinea pigs reported they, too, experienced hallucinations, along with a similar rise in extrasensory perception.

The expedition that discovered the mushrooms was financed jointly by the University of Washington and a TV program, which plans to show next month a film of mushroom rites of half-wild Mexican Indians.

I may watch the TV show but, no thanks, I'll pass a second helping of mushrooms.

White Hall City Council Hears Of Water Treatment

WHITE HALL—The City Council met in regular session on Tuesday night and following reading of the minutes and bills approved for the city, a talk was given by James LaBuy, a representative of the Illinois State Wildlife Dept. concerning "Fishing Management of White Hall City Lake." He told members that because some of the species of fish multiply much more rapidly than others, a treatment of the water with rotenone becomes necessary. The state will take a free survey of the reservoir, and then make a recommendation to the council as to the degree of treatment required.

Basing his estimate on a 1955 survey of the reservoir, Mr. La Buy said a complete rotenone treatment would cost about $726.00, and if only a partial treatment, the cost could run as low as $65.00. He also assured the group that the use of rotenone would in no way affect the drinking purity of the city water and that since the chemical affected only the head and gills of the fish, they would be edible after being dressed out.

The council had previously voted to have a rotenone treatment for the reservoir and Mr. LaBuy stated that the survey would be made in August or September of 1961, and after allowing a month for the effects of the rotenone to wear off, the reservoir would be restocked with suitable fish in October 1961.

Discussions by council members of certain sanitary and fire hazards which exist at various locations in the city was held and steps for the correction of same were suggested and adopted by the council members.

There's A Big Boom In The Great Outdoors

By JERRY BENNETT
Written For Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—A year-round public craving for fresh air is giving U. S. Forest Service officials a headache.

More people are flocking every year to the great outdoors for skiing, hiking, boating, hunting, fishing, and horse back riding. Principal locations for the boom are the national forests. Last year they were visited by almost 82 million people, millions more than the timberlands really are equipped to handle.

On a map, the 180 million acres of U. S. timberland appear big enough for any number of nature lovers. But Forest Service officials explain that only special sites are supposed to be used for recreation.

Most of the camp grounds were built before World War II when less than 20 million people visited the forests annually. Today many of the old recreation spots are run down. Thus, armies of campers have been overflowing into undeveloped areas, causing stream pollution and posting forest fire threats.

To combat the problem, Forest Service officials are conducting a massive rehabilitation and building program known as Operation Outdoors. But they are having trouble keeping construction even with demand.

John Sieker, Director of the Forest Service Division of Recreation and Land Uses, explains that the building project was originally geared to handle a predicted 66 million visits by 1962. This is 15 million less than the number who showed up last year.

OREGON'S WILLAMETTE NATIONAL FOREST: More campers than camps.

The goal now is to take care of more than 100 million visitors by 1962. This year's total is expected to be 91 million.

Within two years Forest Service officials hope to complete construction of 6,600 new camp sites. They also plan to finish rehabilitation and expansion of 4,700 old ones. The entire project will cost about $85 million.

This will provide new swimming and winter sports facilities, roads, horsetrails, camp site plumbing, dams and spillways. New restaurants and ski lifts are sprouting on land leased by concessionaries.

Forest Service officials even plan to add touches of modern day easy living to some of the new camp sites. Included may be flush toilets, coin-operated showers and laundries.

State governments are carrying on expansion programs of their own. By 1962, California's five-year recreation project will have cost almost $60 million. Pennsylvania is spending $4 million annually.

Other building programs are being carried on by lumber, pulp, paper and plywood companies that own about 60 million forest acres. A recent survey by the American Forest Products Industries, Inc., shows that about 50 million of these acres are open to the public.

About 107 companies operate 302 public parks and picnic areas on their forest property. Forty-three of these businesses plan to build additional parks in 1961 while 93 companies plan park developments for later dates.

Newsman Describes Snagging Speeding Capsules From Space

Editor's Note—How do those turtle-slow airplanes catch speeding satellites from space? With sky hooks, reports the first newsman allowed to watch the Air Force practice that out-of-this-world game.

By JACK SCHREIBMAN

HICKAM AIR FORCE BASE, Hawaii (AP)—When the day dawns that the United States puts an astronaut into space, the country will have a handful of skilled and doggedly determined men to thank for helping put them there.

They are the cone catchers of Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii.

They have been given a task without precedent in history, using equipment no air force has ever used.

There is no manual of instructions. They are writing it.

Their assignment: To fly into a 12,000-square-mile area near Hawaii and make air catches of Discoverer capsules which orbited the earth at 18,000 miles an hour and were triggered earthward from some 400 miles up.

On Aug. 19 they proved it could be done. A nine-man crew in a C119 Flying Boxcar snagged the Discover XIV capsule at 8,500 feet—intact, undamaged, its radio beacon beeping merrily.

A second capsule was caught in air last month.

While the feat was making headlines everywhere, the cone catchers were going back to work, grimly hacking away at the small percentage of times they miss during practice flights.

The 6593rd Test Squadron, composed of 125 pilots, crewmen and ground support personnel, operates out of cavernous Hangar 4 at Hickam.

The boss is Maj. Joseph Nellor of Olathe, Kan., a slim, serious man of 40 who has spent nearly half his life in the Air Force piloting troop carriers.

He sat in his austere hangar office, talking quietly about recovery, the subject nearest his heart. Across the room sat a tall, rawboned man of 38 in a flying suit.

This was Capt. Larry W. Shinnick Jr. of Frederick, Md., in charge of all recovery personnel training and records.

"As far as I am concerned, Shinnick knows more about recovery than any man in the Air Force," said Nellor.

"Catching nose cones is old business to us," Shinnick offered. "Since the operation started we have made 2,000 simulated cone catches on the fly. We have 95 per cent success.

"If a pilot misses a drop one week, he has to make two tries the next. But we're not having any trouble at all," he grinned.

Outside the office sat a C119, the squat, awkward-looking aircraft the cone catchers use in their recoveries. The squadron has nine. "The C119 was chosen because it opens at the end so that we could trail the snagging equipment," Shinnick explained.

The Air Force recently decided to relax recovery security and take a newsman aloft to witness a practice flight.

We walked to the flight line early one morning. The pilot was Capt. Warren Schensted, 31, of Glenwood, Minn. He said he would fly into a "ballpark" 60 miles south of Bahu with three other C119s.

One behind the other, the ungainly birds wound up to full 7,000 horsepower and lumbered into the sunny sky.

Each C119 normally has a crew of nine, plus a photographer.

Forty-five minutes later we were in the ballpark and circling like so many fat little bees at 13,000 feet. Schensted signalled readiness. Back in the plane, the rear clamshell hatch opened to the sky. The temperature swiftly dropped to 40 degrees.

Four men, called pole handlers or loadmasters, removed two 34-foot steel poles from their racks and placed loops around the ends of each.

The loops were attached to 4,800-pound test nylon line which ran into the plane, accordion-folded along a metal trough and fed onto a drum controlled by a winch operator.

A few minutes later, Schensted signalled that a drop had been made from another C119. Practice objects are 120-pound cement blocks suspended from nylon parachutes.

We spotted the 'chute immediately, floating down at 1,500 feet a minute.

Schensted cut the plane's speed sharply from 178 to 114 miles an hour by idling the engines, applying full wing flaps and dropping our landing gear. It was a shock.

You could almost smell the tension. Through the open hatch, the clouds parted and we could see the blue ocean far below.

We closed in. It looked like we were going to hit the 'chute.

In the rear, the crew, taut as watchsprings, saw the parachute stream by underneath. Then it hit the snares. We heard a noise like a cannon shot as 200 feet of nylon whipped out furiously.

Then the automatic winch brake took hold, and we had one practice nose cone in our clutches. The winch operator began reeling it in.

New Post Office At Ashland Now In Operation

ASHLAND—After a few month's delay, Ashland is now enjoying their new post office, having opened up this week. Many folks have had quite a bit of trouble in learning how to operate the combinations on their lock boxes, and hoping by the end of this week that they have conquered such.

The postoffice is indeed an attractive place and an asset to the town. Mr. and Mrs. Don Gainer were the successful bidders in building the new postoffice. The construction work was done by Charles Mitchell, of this city.

Formal dedication ceremonies will be held in a month or two.

The building has tile floors, florescent lighting, adequate work space for sorting and dispatching the mail, a private office, two rest rooms and lobby. The mail trucks use the loading area in the rear of the building.

First U. S. census report in 1790 was a booklet of only 56 pages.

A Christmas Story With Two Endings

ARTIST DOHANOS was struck by TB.

BY WARD CANNEL
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—This is a Christmas story. It begins with a steel mill hand named Stevan Dohanos who overcomes certain obstacles to make it big.

"I thought I had a little talent," Dohanos said, "so I finally decided to go to art school. But when you come from a family of nine and your people are immigrants, it's not that easy.

"I used to drive 60 miles a night from the steel mill in Lorain to the art school in Cleveland and back again to be at work at 6:30 in the morning.

"But it was the right thing to do. I got a job in an art studio in Cleveland and got married and we had two kids. It was wonderful. And then I got a big break—a chance to go to New York."

• • •

Within days, however, Dohanos was in a sanitorium. Tuberculosis had cut him down.

"You can't tell about TB," he said. "It killed my next younger brother and my next older sister—the three of us middle children—but it never touched anybody else in the family."

It was 1932. Effective anti-tuberculosis drugs were unknown. Dohanos had to quit work for bed rest and quiet for nearly a year.

"Then we decided to go to New York anyway," he said. "I got a job in a studio and things started to look up again. I was drawing everything under the sun. It was wonderful, exciting, hectic for 10 years."

And then tuberculosis hit him again. By then, one of his wife's brothers had died of TB. Another had been sent to a sanitorium with it.

• • •

And still there were no effective drugs. Once more Dohanos was sent to bed. Work stopped. Income stopped.

"I decided I had had enough," he said. "If I were going to live I'd better work at home, even if it meant less work and less income. I just couldn't risk any more stress."

Since that decision, Dohanos has become one of the top free lance artists in the country. You have seen his covers on the magazines you read. You have mailed letters with postage stamps he has designed. You've seen his work in many museums, books, encyclopedias.

Today, when highly effective drugs against TB are finally available, Dohanos has become the symbol of the old, long fight against the disease. He is the 1960 Honorary Christmas Seal Chairman of the National Tuberculosis Assn.

That's the happy ending.

• • •

The other ending is:

● At least 35 million Americans are infected with TB germs today

● More than 60,000 new active cases are reported each year.

● Better than 11,000 Americans die of TB each year—even though the disease can be detected in its earliest stages and completely cured. Even if it has progressed too far for cure, it can be arrested.

Why this waste of life?

According to the TB Assn., because you can't force people to take a painless, harmless effective skin test once a year.

"It couldn't possibly happen to them," Dohanos says.

West Coast Fishermen Keep Missile Launchers Fuming

From nearby Point Mugu, headquarters of the Pacific Missile Range, a Navy plane takes off on a delicate mission: to persuade the skipper of the fishing boat to leave the area.

Flying over the boat, the plane waggles its wings and heads off in the direction it wants the boat to take.

Nothing happens.

The plane circles again. This time the pilot calls over a loud speaker: "You are in a hazardous area. For your own safety, please move out until after the launching."

Nothing happens.

The plane returns to base and a crash boat roars out to see if the personal touch will help.

Sometimes it turns out that the fishermen are Japanese or Portuguese and don't understand English. But this is rare.

Most of the time it's the same old story. Fishermen just aren't afraid of missiles—or the U. S. Navy, either, beyond the three-mile zone.

The conflict between one of the oldest industries—fishing—and one of the newest—rocketry—has cost thousands of dollars and delays of hours and even days in the launching of missiles from the West Coast.

Exact figures are unavailable. In the two years since the first missile was fired from here, some progress has been made in educating fishermen to clear out of dangerous areas on launching days. Officials don't want to say anything that would anger the fishermen who cooperate. But they do admit the problem is serious.

The power of the harbor radio station at Santa Barbara has been increased so the Navy can break in on the fishing fleet chit-chat to give a warning.

Danger zones are posted at fishing piers up and down the coast. Naval officers talk to gatherings of fishermen, telling them of the danger from falling debris if a missile should veer off course and have to be destroyed overhead.

But the problem persists.

Ask some fishermen to stay out of an area and they will smile stubbornly and say: "Yah, sure. You tell the fish that. Where they go, we go."

These men say that leaving a school of fish for a few hours could cost them as much as a fourth of their earnings for the whole year.

"These planes can buzz me all they want," says one. "But I do not leave. There ain't nothing the Navy can do if I don't want to move, and they know it and I know it."

What about the actual danger?

"If you scare easy, stay ashore. This work ain't for sissies. Besides, nobody's been hurt yet."

From time to time the pressure needed to force super-cold liquid oxygen into the firing chamber drops and more must be pumped into the missile.

If this goes on too long, valves may freeze and the shot is canceled for the day. The missile stops fuming, but the crewmen don't.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market this week flouted recession talk and gloomy economic news by mounting the biggest rally in a month on the heaviest turnover since the end of June.

As industrial issues—many of them rebounding from 1960 lows—forged gains, brokers theorized that Wall Street may be anticipating a business upturn in the spring or be launching a traditional yearend rally. They observed that tax selling got under way early this fall because of severe losses and much of it may be out of the way.

Investors and traders seemed to ignore the dismal news. The steel industry operating rate fell to 48.3 per cent of rated capacity, lowest this year for any non holiday week. Unemployment was reported spreading in three-fifths of the nation's industrial centers. Business expenditures for capital spending, an important clue to economy, were reported tapering off.

The Dow Jones industrial average this week rose 14.90 to 610.90.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose 3.70 to 217.80, for its biggest rise since the week ended Nov. 5 when it gained 5.20.

Volume soared to 18.31 million shares from 16.81 million a week ago and was the heaviest since the week ended June 25 when turnover was 19.73 million shares.

The most active issue this week on the American Stock Exchange was Equity Corp., up ⅛ at 4⅜ on 217,90 shares.

U.S. government bond prices spurted ¾ to 1¾ points higher this week in the best showing since the end of July. Corporates held firm, as measured by the averages.

Market analysts had no difficulty in detailing reasons for the rally of treasury securities, which have moved upward in seven of the last eight sessions.

In general the reasons embraced the continued business slowdown and forecasts that it will last through the first half of 1961, some constructive proposals to alter the adverse balance of payments and gold outflow and a surprise reduction in the British bank lending rate to 5 per cent from 5½.

Volume totaled $30.96 million par value, about the same as the previous week and again the third highest of the year. The daily average was $6.19 million compared with $6.18 million.

BULLISH TREND IN GRAINS KEEPS PRICE LEVELS HIGH

CHICAGO (AP) — The grain futures market worked in a generally bullish cycle this week and nearly all contracts finished well upward with old crop wheat and soybeans leading the advance.

December and March wheat ended at their highest levels of the season after three successive broad gains. The December delivery was up almost five cents a bushel, March about two cents.

At the end of the week, wheat was 1-4½ cents a bushel higher than a week ago December $2.07-07¼; corn ¼ higher to ½ lower, December $1.04¼; oats unchanged to 2¼ higher, December 59¾-60 cents; rye 1¼-1¾ higher, December $1.08⅞; soybeans 1¢-3½ higher, January $2.18.

With most of the grains only a few cents off their season lows following a moderate recovery, trade was in good volume most of the time. Brokers said the market appeared to have overcome the general bearish sentiment as offerings in the pit and at the cash tables slackened markedly.

Corn, the star performer of last week, continued in good demand most of the time but two setbacks late in the week lopped off most of its early gains.

The late weakness was ascribed more to profit taking among speculators rather than any significant change in basic market factors. However, one trade report during the week mentioned that a large percentage of the new crop corn in some areas is of low moisture content and could be marketed as high quality grain any time. That report conflicted with others which said nearly all the crop was still wet.

Traders, the speculators particularly, lost little time in covering short positions in the wheat pit when word circulated there that withdrawals from Chicago commercial positions had been unusually heavy.

The report caused some concern among the shorts that offers to deliver on December contracts would be meager, especially since the outward movement included large amounts of soft red wheat which is in good demand at the cash tables.

school building and announced that protection would be given to all comers, regardless of Salumu's order. The Ethiopians have been criticized frequently by the pro-Western regime of Col. Joseph Mobutu in recent weeks for standing by while Salumu's men ill-treated the population, white and Congolese alike.

A group of Western embassy officials flew to Stanleyville Saturday to help Belgians and other foreigners threatened by Salumu's ultimatum. Plans were made for a mass airlift of whites, but this seemed no longer necessary when Salumu's threat failed to materialize.

Of the 1,000 whites living in Stanleyville itself, only about 100, including many women and children, sought protection in the U.N.-guarded school building Friday night. It appeared the white population felt confident the simple assertion of U.N. firmness would remove the threat.

There was some concern about the fate of Lumumba's former communications minister, Alphonse Songolo, and nine other anti-Lumumba members of Parliament held in Stanleyville for several weeks. Songolo was arrested by the Stanleyville regime after he publicly had broken with Lumumba. He is reported to have lost the sight of an eye through a savage beating received in prison.

It was feared that Salumu, thwarted in his plan to use the local white population as hostages, might now turn his attention to his 10 Congolese political prisoners.

Gen. Iyassu conferred with Salumu and other leaders of the Stanleyville regime Saturday morning. Informed sources said Iyassu had expressed the United Nations' determination to safeguard all foreigners living in the province. The informants said Iyassu also had tried to obtain Salumu's assurance that Songolo and his fellow prisoners would not be harmed.

Mobutu has drawn a parallel between Songolo and Lumumba and announced that the normal judical process against Lumumba will not even begin before Songolo is release. Lumumba is to be charged with inciting the army to mutiny and leading the nation toward civil war.

The firm U.N. action against Salumu brought hints of reconciliation between the U.N. and the Mobutu regime. Relations between them have been chill to freezing.

MOSLEMS, SETTLERS CLASH IN ALGIERS

A pall of tear gas hung over the center of the city Saturday night. The area was completely ringed by soldiers who just waited, peacefully, for orders to move in.

Many of the European rioters appeared to be older men, not the student mobs of the earlier actions. They had thrown up barricades on some side streets and were in a nasty mood.

"We are going to stay here to the end," one said.

The French president, now 70, imperturbably continued a six-day Algerian inspection trip while Europeans in Algiers and Oran exploded violently for the second straight day. A Moslem 15 years old was reported killed by the fire of European settlers in Oran.

With the army standing firm and Moslems cheering him wildly, there seemed little doubt that De Gaulle was winning a decisive test over the rightist settlers who consider his policy of self-determination another word for abandonment.

STEVENSON DELAYS DECISION ABOUT ACCEPTING U.N. JOB

"Does that mean that the appointment of the secretary of state would precede your appointment?" he was asked.

"I think yes," Stevenson said.

When Kennedy disclosed Thursday that he had offered the job to Stevenson, the former Democratic presidential candidate said he was deferring his decision until next week pending resolution of "some unknown factors."

The impression was left that Kennedy had been unable to tell him who would be secretary of state and uncertainty about the man he would serve under had been a factor in Stevenson delaying his decision.

Stevenson said Saturday that he expected to go to Washington from Chicago early next week. In reference to the appointment, however, he added:

"We may do it all by telephone."

Newsmen asked him if he had urged any personal choices for secretary of state upon the president-elect.

"No sir," he answered.

To a question of under what conditions and which secretary of state he would accept the U.N. post, Stevenson aid:

"I hope that I will be able to serve under any of them."

Discussing the U.N. job, Stevenson described it as "a most important post" and added:

"It is the center of our foreign policy, and the survival and protection of the United Nations is indispensable to the security and peace of our country and the world."

LEADERLESS LAOS WALLOWS IN CHAOS

Saturday. It was dated Friday morning and bore Souvanna's signature. It said:

"Owing to the situation created by discord among the military in the Vientiane region, the government feels obliged to delegate—as of 9 a.m. Dec. 9—all civil and military powers to the military headquarters of the armed forces."

Sounthone said he will be president, a Col. Tham first vice president, Kong Le second vice president, and Col. Heun, Tiao Seng and Boun Ma member of the committee.

He read the text to the Western diplomatic corps, including U.S., British, and Soviet ambassadors in the presidential palace.

U.S. Ambassador Winthrop G. Brown had a whispered conference with Sounthone after the meeting.

Sounthone said the military government will be in charge "until a solution to the present crisis can be worked out."

Truce talks have been scheduled at Phan Man Temple, midway between Vientiane and the positions outside it held by the rightist forces of Gen. Phoumi Nosavan.

PT Boat Crew To Ride In Kennedy's Inaugural Parade

WASHINGTON (AP)— Members of the original PT boat crew of former Lt. (j.g.) John F. Kennedy will ride down Pennsylvania Ave. on the day their skipper will be inaugurated president of the United States.

The former Navy men will ride in a PT boat, last of its type in commission. The boat is being brought up from Panama City, Fla., for the occasion.

His former crew will be only a small portion of the 40 military units that will be in the inaugural parade.

More than 15,800 members of the armed forces will participate.

The parade plans were announced Saturday by Maj. Gen. C. K. Galley, chairman of the Armed Forces Participation Committee.

The soldiers, Marines, airmen and sailors will move from the Capitol along Pennsylvania Avenue and past the White House, where President-elect John F. Kennedy will review the marching units.

Military hardware also will be on display in the parade. This will include Army-Navy missiles, models of the Air Force's B70 and X15 aircraft and carrier fighter aircraft.

Hint Kennedy To Ask Republicans To Be On Cabinet

Washington Thursday evening for a 45-minute meeting with Dillon. The heretofore unannounced session was at Dillon's residence in the capital.

"Mr. Dillon has seen news stories speculating that he has been offered a position in the administration of President - elect Kennedy," it said.

"Mr. Dillon did meet with Sen. Kennedy this past Thursday evening in Washington at the President-elect's request. They discussed foreign trade policies, the balance of payments, the mutual security program, the scheduled establishment next week in Paris of the new Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, and related subjects in the international field raised by the president-elect."

In reply to a question, Donnelley said that "no position has been offered" to Dillon by Kennedy.

Salinger also declined comment on reports that another man being considered for the Treasury post is Robert S. McNamara, recently chosen president of the Ford Motor Co. McNamara, 44, also is being mentioned for secretary of defense. He went to Harvard during the same period Kennedy did.

Arthur J. Goldberg, Chicago and Washington attorney, who as general counsel of the Steelworkers Union helped settle last year's steel strike, is in line for the post of secretary of labor. Goldberg, 52, was instrumental in ending the AFL-CIO feud and is author of the constitution of the merged AFL-CIO.

Kennedy is spending the weekend at the family's Atlantic shore home with his wife, their son, now 2 weeks old, and their daughter Caroline, 3. The baby and mother checked out of Georgetown University Hospital in Washington Friday just a few hours before traveling to Palm Beach by plane with the president-elect.

For Kennedy, Saturday was mostly a day of relaxation after another busy week of preparation for taking over the reins of government Jan. 20. But Salinger reported the president-elect was spending some time on the phone lining up men for key federal jobs.

The press secretary ruled out any announcement of selections for top federal posts Saturday, but left open the possibility there might be some word from Kennedy on that before he flies back to Washington Monday.

Kennedy did announce the formal appointment of Prof. Richard E. Neustadt, Columbia University specialist on the powers of the American presidency, as a consultant on matters of government organization.

Actually, Neustadt has been serving as an aide to Kennedy in that field for some time. He has been working with Clark Clifford, the president-elect's chief liaison man with the Eisenhower administration, in planning the transition from a Republican to a Democratic regime.

Saturday's announcement was that Neustadt will continue to serve as consultant until at least February. He may stay on longer if his services are needed.

Neustadt was a White House special assistant during the Truman administration, and he served earlier in that administration as an assistant director of the Budget Bureau.

Kennedy had hoped to have his 10-member Cabinet completed by this weekend, but he apparently is having more difficulty than he anticipated in finding—and getting acceptances from — the men he wants.

FAN BREEZES

BY STAN SPOTTS
Journal Courier Sports Editor

Sometimes it's a pleasure to write this column and then other times it becomes a burden when you strive to say the right thing without hurting someone's feelings. In this case I have something to say and it isn't about an individual. It concerns all of us. This all began recently when I heard a coach remark, "In this day and age, it's a common and easy thing to criticize the other fellow. We're all guilty of this terrible habit and although we may not realize it, this is bound to have a bad effect on our children because they hear it daily."

—O—

I won't mention the coach's name. But I do know what he was trying to get across. Most of us aren't rich and yet we aren't starving. Some may have sound reasons for an argument here. Yet, a day hardly passes when we don't criticize either the government, a neighbor, our city officials, the grocer, the retail merchants, a friend, a coach and his team, the boss, the church, or school. There has to be someone we can blow off steam about and in general we take it out on one or all. This is because of our daily problems that arise and we know of no other way to ease the pressure. Now, there is nothing wrong in doing this if the children aren't around. If they are, then it gets to be a habit with them even if they're only five years old because what Mom and Dad believe is good enough for them.

—O—

Children can learn to become critical of their classmates' clothes or their toys. This all pertains to advancing years. When a boy becomes old enough to play sports and he gets into real competition the sledding becomes rough. As all humans will do, he makes mistakes. But being the critical one all his life, he honestly believes he is justified in blaming others for his minor errors. It becomes an obsession with him and as a result the team suffers. Boys that participate in high school or college athletics are no longer boys that need the parents' protection of standing up for his rights—he is a man and should be treated as such. When getting home from the ball game the lad hears his parents remark, "Well, the better team didn't win. The officials beat us." This may be true in some cases and should be considered a moral victory. But how does a lad feel after hearing this remark? He feels he was justified in blaming the ref and as a result he considers every official a so and co. Maybe—just maybe—this will be his outlook on every boss he works for and he'll probably have a number of them.

—O—

I also catch myself criticizing others. It's the personal makeup of the American public. But I never alibi. One of my favorite athletes a few years ago wrote in my yearbook, "No matter how good you think you are there's always someone a little bit better." My parents were also helpful in teaching me the lessons of life when I participated in sports. First—do unto others as you would have them do unto you. Second—judge not, lest you be judged. Several times after getting home from a loss, I would say we should have won but those officials! I never said this again after they replied—Oh, I don't know about that. It looked to me like number 66 or number 11 was too good for you guys to handle. Needless to say, the third thing I learned early was to respect the other guy's abilities. And I've never forgotten these teachings despite my other shortcomings such as being short-tempered.

—O—

I have no solution to this problem other than to keep our critical feelings away from the kids. Instead of sympathizing with the boys if they fail to make the team, encourage them to work harder. Squelch early blame of officials for a loss (even though they were at fault) and teach them to respect the other person and his abilities. He'll be a better athlete and a man you'll be proud to call your son when he gets out on his own because you know you've done your best which sometimes isn't good enough. This criticizing embryo starts at home with mom and pop and it can be corrected although it means a change of pace. As I said, it's easy to be critical and this column is the evidence.

Runnels Wins AL Batting Title

BOSTON (AP)—Pete Runnels, the veteran handyman of the Boston Red Sox, won the 1960 American League batting title, official American League batting records show.

The official figures were released Saturday, after months of checking, and confirm unofficial figures announced at the close of the season.

Runnels hit .320 while playing three infield spots for the Red Sox. It was the first batting crown for the 10-year veteran, but he's been close two other times.

The 32-year-old Texan was third last year with a .314 mark and the season before hit .322, losing the title to teammate Ted Williams on the final day of the season.

Only two others eligible for the batting crown hit .300 or more. New York's Bill Skowron had a .309 mark and the 1959 leader, Harvey Kuenn of Cleveland had .308.

Voris, Virginia Call It Quits

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP)—The University of Virginia, its football teams winless in 28 straight games, and Coach Dick Voris called it quits Saturday.

The university's Board of visitors decided to accept Voris resignation and pay his salary for the remainder of his contract which runs to Feb. 1, 1962.

The development came as no surprise after the board's Athletic Committee Friday night failed to give Voris the vote of confidence he said was necessary for him to remain at Virginia.

Badgers Defeat Marquette, 55-51

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Wisconsin survived a late rally to hand Marquette its first defeat of the basktball season, 55-51, Saturday.

The Warriors from Marquette, down 28-21 at intermission, knotted the score at 45-45 with three minutes left, then went ahead 49-47 on a pair of free throws by scoring Ace Don Kojim.

Tom Hughbanks hit 17 points and Ulwelling had 15 for Wisconsin. Ron Glaser's 11 points was high for Marquette.

Kojis, who averaged 33 points a game in the previous two contests, was bottled up by the Badger man-to-man defense and was held to eight points.

New Los Angeles And Washington Teams Must Pick 28 Players

BOSTON (AP)—The new Los Angeles and Washington baseball teams will have the opportunity to select up to 36 players at American League headquarters Tuesday.

The league office Saturday announced that each of the two new AL entries will have the option of picking one "unprotected" minor league player from each of the established eight clubs.

Los Angeles and Washington must pick 28 players apiece from a list of 120 eligibles on current parent club rosters, 15 submitted by each of those clubs.

This meeting to supply much of the player personnel will be attended by American League President Joe Cronin and his staff; Los Angeles President Bobby Reynolds, Chairman of the Board Gene Autry and General Manager Fred Haney; plus Gen. Elwood Quesada, owner, General Manager Eddie Doherty and Manager Mickey Vernon of the Washington group.

Cronin said there will be a list of approximately 160 minor league players available if Washington and Los Angeles decide to select any. They don't have to take any but can't have more than one from each club list. These players are those on the regular selection list for the Nov. 28 baseball draft who were not picked at that time.

The purchase price will be the regular draft price ranging from $12,500 to $25,000 depending on the classification of the league in which they played.

The purchase price of the 28 "must" players will be $75,000.

Goose Season To Close Monday In Southern Ill.

GOOSE SEASON TO CLOSE IN SOUTHERN ILLINOIS

Shooting of Canada geese in Alexander, Jackson, Union, and Williamson Counties, Illinois, will be closed at 3 p.m. Monday, December 12.

Allan T. Studholme, Chief of Wildlife activities for the Minneapolis Regional Office of the Federal Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, said this closure is a joint action of the Illinois Department of Conservation and the Federal Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

The Illinois Department of Conservation order closes the season on all wild geese. Since waterfowl seasons for the rest of the State ended December 6, this action terminates the 1960 waterfowl hunting seasons in Illinois.

Studholme points out that Federal waterfowl hunting regulations this year include a provision that when 14,000 Canada geese are killed in these 4 counties, the season will be closed. This quota will be reached on or before 3 p.m. December 12.

The regulation was necessary to prevent an overharvest of geese from the Mississippi Valley flock. Last year, after several years of increase, this goose flock declined. Subsequently, the Mississippi Flyway Council, which represents all of the 14 States in the Mississippi Flyway, asked the Federal Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife to limit the kill this fall in the vicinty of Horicon and Necedah National Wildlife Refuges in Wisconsin and Horseshoe Lake, Union County area, Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge, and other concentration areas in southern Illinois to a total of 21,0000 Canada geese. Secretary of the Interior Fred A. Seaton approved the proposal.

The goose season was closed in the Wisconsin areas on October 16 after the agreed harvest of 7,000 had been reached.

MacKay Clinches Comeback Victory

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

PERTH, Australia (AP) — A fighting comeback by Barry MacKay provided both a cushion and encouragement Sunday for America's schoolboy doubles team which hoped to put over the knockout punch in the Davis Cup interzone finals.

In a late decision, David Freed, the U.S. captain, named Earl (Butch) Buchholz and Chuck McKinley, both of St. Louis, to face Italy's Nicola Pietrangeli and Orlando Sirola in the vital doubles.

A victory would clinch the best-of-five series at 3-0 and send the scrappy, young Yankee team against Australia in the challenge round at Sydney starting Dec. 26.

Pressure on the two youngsters —Buchholz is 20 and McKinley 19 —was eased by the brilliant, almost unbelievable, recovery by MacKay, who looked down the barrel of eight match points and lived to tell about it.

In a match which started on a rainy, blustery Friday and finished in Saturday's sunshine after 78 games, the 25-year-old battler from Dayton, Ohio, turned back Pietrangeli, Europe's top amateur, 8-6, 3-6, 8-10, 8-6, 13-11.

The talented Italian, playing superbly, had five match points on the first day, when he seized a lead of two sets to one. He had three more Saturday before MacKay finally broke through in the 78th game and climaxed his stirring performance with a sizzling service ace.

This triumph, following Buchholz's Friday victory over Sirola with opening single, not only staked the United States to a 2-0 lead, but may have saved it the ignominy of failing to reach the challenge round for the first time in 24 years.

Purdue Triumphs Over Ball State

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue used 15 basketball players and 11 of them scored Saturday night in a 73-48 victory over Ball State's Cardinals.

Purdue, making its first home appearance, lost a pair of close games last week at Pittsburgh and Penn State.

Olympian Terry Dischinger took charge after Ball State led early at 10-8. Dischinger, who had taken only one shot up to that point, made eight consecutive points and Purdue was in control the rest of the way.

Dischinger had been fighting the flu this week and played less than half the game, finishing with 12 points. Bobby Orrill added 12, Mike McGinley 13 and Jerry Berkshire 11 to the Purdue total.

UNKNOWN SCULPTOR

It is not known who made the famous statue of "The Winged Victory of Samothrace" or when it was made. Some scholars place its date around 300 B.C. while others state it is a work of the 100s B.C.

Kefauver Thinks Congress Should Regulate Boxing

By G. MILTON KELLY

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn., said Saturday only federal policing can rip away a "web of hoodlumism and racketeering" he sees enveloping professional boxing.

In a week of hearings, Kefauver's Senate Antimonpoly subcommittee has received testimony picturing racketeers fattening off the earnings of champion boxers and their managers, and playing an important behind-the-scene role in deciding who gets a crack at a title.

Kefauver said in an interview that evidence is crystal clear that state control is ineffective, and that Congress should place boxing under strict federal regulation. He said this could be done without interfering with state control.

He said he was inclined to favor a law giving such a commission authority to license participants in interstate boxing, revoke licenses for cause, and bar known racketeers from managing or promoting activities.

Kefauver mentioned possible alternatives such as assigning the Justice Department or some other existing agency to the job.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, R-Ill., a subcommittee member, said in a separate interview that he also believes federal action may be needed.

But Dirsken said he does not see how Congress can impose licensing on one sport without ultimately extending it to pro baseball, hockey, football and basketball. That would put athletics in a "bureaucratic straitjacket," Dirksen said.

Listed to testify when the subcommittee resumes its hearings on Monday is Sonny Liston, ranking contender for the heavyweight title now held by Floyd Patterson.

A St. Louis police lieutenant, Joseph Kuda, told the subcommittee Friday that racketeers control the bulk of the manager's end of purses won by Liston, although Liston's manager of record is Joseph (Pep) Barone of Allentown, Pa.

Illinois Normal Hits 63 Per Cent For 90-73 Victory

Fouls Decide First Loss For Highlanders

NORMAL, Ill. — A tall and fast Illinois Normal University quintet dominated play here most of the way for a 90-73 victory over MacMurray College Saturday night. The winners connected on 63 per cent of their shots from the floor although they garnered only one more field goal than did the Highlanders, 31-30.

The difference resulted under the boards and too many MacMurray fouls. Normal made 28 charity awards to MacMurray's 13.

The Highlanders lost Ron Price, Tom Flynn and Marv Hohenberger via the foul route in the second half. MacMurray also suffered a big loss when Roy Hahnfeld injured his ankle with 16 minutes remaining in the first half and had to leave the game.

MacMurray saw the lead only twice, 15-14, with 11 minutes remaining in the first half and 18-16 at the 10 minute mark.

Flynn of the Highlanders captured game laurels with 19 tallies. The loss was the first in five starts for Bill Wall's group. The win was Normal's third without defeat.

Practice Games May Help Morley Solve Problems

Five non-conference "practice" games may assist Coach Leroy Morley of the Western Illinois University Leathernecks basketball team to iron out some problems before tangling with Illinois Normal in a conference tilt at Macomb, Dec. 16.

One mere non-conference hurdle is a veteran, undefeated Quincy College team, which will invade Morgan Gym, Macomb, Dec. 13 to give the Purple and Gold team their first test on a home floor.

In their first four non-conference games, crowded into a single week, the Macomb team lost to Notre Dame, Dec. 1, 79-56, won over St. Ambrose, Dec. 3, 94-90, lost to MacMurray, Dec. 5, 91-84, and lost to Northeast Missouri State Teachers, Dec. 7, 77-72.

Problems arise mainly from final examinations, eligibility requirements, and injury, according to Coach Morley.

"We're farther behind this year than we have ever been at this stage before," he said. "We never had the full squad together at one time in pre-season practice."

Roger Uhe from Lena, Ill., a 6 ft. 5 inch transfer student who is a potential first stringer, has been absent because of a back injury.

In a radio interview over the university station WWKS-FM, Ray Hanson, athletic director, cautioned fans not to expect the high scoring that has become the trade-mark of Leatherneck teams.

"Morley is rebuilding," he said. "It looks as if our boys will have an uphill fight each game this year."

In this rebuilding, Coach Morley has juggled his startling line-up, and he says there may be more changes as the season progresses.

Chargers Subdue Denver, 41-33

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Los Angeles Chargers came from behind three times to subdue the stubborn Denver Broncos 41-33 and sew up the Western Division title of the American Football League Saturday.

The favored Chargers cashed in on a break midway in the fourth quarter to go ahead for the last time, then won the contest on another break later in the final period.

The outcome gave the Chargers a record of 9 victories, 4 defeats and only one more game to play against New York next week.

The Chargers put a terrific rush on the Bronco punter, George Herring, in a key play that set up the winning touchdown and he got off a poor 20-yard kick that went out of bounds on the Denver 35.

Quarterback Jack Kemp required eight plays to get the ball to the one and then plunged over for the tally.

MacMurray also took the first match on a pin, Scott Engroff over Dennis Olsen at 6:56, but lost their initial advantage as the Highlanders' Bill Celander was pinned by Terry Shockley.

The Highlanders did not see the lead again until the final match, as Augustana's 137, 157, and 167 pound men decisioned their MacMurray opponents, and Larry Daily and Gene Benedict won their matches on a decision and pin respectively.

The MacMurray grapplers now hold a dual meet record of 2-0, having defeated Bradley University Thursday. Their next match is December 14 against Illinois College.

Ohio State Routs Army Five, 103-54

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Keyed by the tremendous defensive efforts of John Havlicek and a 29-point scoring effort by All-America basketball ace Jerry Lucas, Ohio State throttled Army 103-54 Saturday night.

The Buckeys, after two unspectacular victories this season, finally flashed the style that carried them to the national collegiate championship last season.

Indiana Loses Double Overtime

DETROIT (AP) — A last-second shot by Tom Villemure gave the University of Detroit an 81-79 upset victory over Indiana in double overtime Saturday night.

Villemure's game-winner, a 20-foot set shot from the corner, came after the Titans had stalled out the last 69 seconds in order to get the final shot in the second overtime period.

The victory, Detroit's third in a row, climaxed an uphill drive in the second extra session after Indiana twice had gone ahead by two-point margins.

Charlie North's tip-in had pulled Detroit even and then after Indiana muffed two chances, Detroit regained the ball for its winning effort.

Bob Grottkau of the Detroit Lions spent the off-season from football in the U. S. Army. He was a cook.

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP)—Led by Charles Henke who scored 21 of his 27 points in the second half, Missouri's Tigers tripped Northwestern 73-72 in a rugged basketball struggle Saturday night.

While Henke was being held to six points in the first half, the other half of Missouri's one-two punch, Joe Scott, helped the Tigers grab a 33-30 halftime lead. Scott scored 11 of his 15 points in the first half.

Northwestern took an early lead and was ahead 21-20 when sophomore Ken Doughty scored six straight points to put the Tigers ahead to stay 26-21.

Late in the second half, Northwestern came within one point at 60-59, but Henke went on a scoring spree to put the Tigers ahead 71-64.

Northwestern, paced by Bill Cacciatore, rallied in the final minute but fell short. Cacciatore led all scorers with 29 points.

Honor Truman As 'Man Of Century'

CHICAGO (AP)—Former President Harry S. Truman, being honored as the "Man of the Century" by the National Israel Bond Organization, said Saturday night he sees no differences "between Israel and her Arab neighbors that cannot be peacefully resolved."

It will take patience, understanding and time to overcome the difficulties that exist, Truman said. "I hope the best interests of all concerned will allow reason to prevail."

"I would hope that very soon cooler heads in the Arab world will heed the opportunity to negotiate with Israel to bring about peaceful relations. It can be done," he said in an address prepared for delivery at a testimonial dinner in his honor.

Some 4,000 business and civic leaders from throughout the nation attended the dinner in McCormick Place where the "Man of the Century" citation was presented to Truman.

"You'll never know how difficult it is for me to remember that I'm only a retired farmer from Jackson County, Missouri," Truman said in accepting the citation.

Eastern Kentucky beat the Bonnies at their own ball-hawking, fast-break game in the first half.

Eddie Schnurr of Notre Dame took charge of tacking the ball through Bowling Green's semi-press and the Irish ran up a 58-40 lead before sending in the reserves.

Schnurr was high scorer with 20 points. Thurmond led Bowling Green with 13.

Storm Paralyzes Southwest, Moves On Into Midwest

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Snow and ice which paralyzed and isolated parts of New Mexico and Texas swept northeast into the Midwest Saturday.

The Southwest's worst snow-ice storm of the season left many towns without communication to the outside except by ham radio and halted travel on highways except for desperate need.

Many residents fled the cold to homes of neighbors when power failures shut down electric-blower heating systems.

The Texas state police said hotels and motels remained jammed with travelers in the ice-snow belt.

The Weather Bureau issued heavy snow warnings for Saturday night and Sunday in a band from north central Kansas northeastward across extreme northwest Missouri, extreme southeast Nebraska and extreme southwest Iowa.

The agency predicted four or more inches in the Midwest belt. The bureau also forecast accumulation of four inches or more in western Oklahoma and northwest Texas, with snow and sleet sweeping eastward along the Texas-Oklahoma border.

Freezing rain and some sleet moved into Oklahoma, Kansas and extreme northwest Missouri, causing considerable glazing on highways.

New Mexico reported five deaths from the heavy snows which measured up to 18 inches in the Las Vegas, N.M., area.

Heaviest reported Texas fall was at Quitaque, south of Amarillo, where 12 inches were measured.

Snowfalls up to 10 inches were reported in numerous places.

Big Ten Ends Winter Meetings

CHICAGO (AP) — The Big Ten Saturday ended its winter business meetings without making a recommendation pertaining to the commissionership.

K. L. (Tug) Wilson's five-year contract as commissioner expires June 30. He will be 65 years old in March.

"I will do what the conference wishes," said Wilson, "I desire to help all I can. If they want to make age 65 mandatory to retire, it is up to them."

Wilson, a robust man, indicated he would like to remain as commissioner if the conference wanted him.

"As far as the office is concerned, I think the man will be sought," he said. "It won't be a question of a man seeking the job."

The matter was tabled until the March meetings in Champaign, Ill.

"The committee felt there was no sense of immediacy," said Marcus Plant, Michigan faculty representative. "No action was taken and the question remains under advisement. The committee took no action because it was not ready for any."

Members of the commissionership committee are faculty representatives, John F. Mee of Indiana; Robert Ray, Iowa; T. Leroy Martin, Northwestern; Wendell D. Postle, Ohio State, and V. C. Freeman, Purdue.

The matter of the financial aid to athletes rule, with an academic rank being substituted for the need factor, also was deferred to the March sessions.

Assistant commissioner Bill Reed said that of 677 boys entering with tenders in the Big Ten this term, more than half were in the upper 22 per cent of their graduating high school class and 83 per cent were in the upper half.

St. Louis Wins Over Iowa, 61-55

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — St. Louis handed Iowa its first loss of the basketball season, 61-55, Saturday night.

The Hawkeyes' Don Nelson led the scoring with 21 points but the Bills' Tom Kieffer pumped in 18, Bob Nordmann 15 and Gordon Hartweger 12.

Iowa sophomore Frank Allen outplayed the 6-10 Nordmann under the boards, snagging 11 rebounds to his 6, but St. Louis found holes in the Hawkeye defenses and moved to a 34-22 halftime lead.

Iowa had a splurge late in the second half when the Hawks pulled up to within 4 points at 56-52.

Iowa won its first two games small college opponents.

Maryland blanked the Gophers from the field for 16 straight minutes—one eight-minute stretch in each half.

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Race track owners and officials stood around Aqueduct shaking their heads in mild mortification at the news that five big wheels had walked out on the Thoroughbred Racing Associations.

More important was that the open air gambling casinos had withdrawn from the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau.

Would there be more defections from the now 44-track and nation-wide voluntary trade association? Spencer J. Drayton, one-time assistant of the FBI's J. Edgar Hoover, whom the track proprietors themselves hired to police their plants 15 years ago, didn't believe so. Neither did E. E. Dale Shaffer of Detroit, to name just one track owner.

Still another official suspected that there might be further withdrawals prompted by the increased cost to the tracks.

* * *

STILL IT COULDN'T have been the expense which caused Golden State, Hialeah, Arlington, Washington Park and Balmoral to give the TRA and TRPB the serious brush off.

The entire budget of the TRPB, which represents the biggest outlay, is only a little more than $600,000, which is merely a drop in the ocean when you consider the immense racing loot. Garden State, for example is one of the richer stores, averaging two million daily.

While five plants decided to write their own tickets, only two magnates are involved. Eugene Mori, silvery-thatched, 60-year-old former New Jersey contractor and automobile dealer, controls Garden State and Hialeah. Mrs. Marjorie Lindheimer Everett inherited Arlington, Washington Park and Balmoral from her father, Ben, who died early this year.

As a matter of fact, Ben Lindheimer and Gene Mori launched the movement against Executive Vice-President Drayton two years ago.

"For reasons unknown to me," says Drayton, "certain people are selfishly attempting to destroy all that has been accomplished toward making racing highly respected."

* * *

IT GOES WITHOUT saying that Mori and Mrs. Everett have a perfect right to supervise their own games, but by its very nature, racing is as hard to police as the Marseilles waterfront or an East Harlem slum.

When Drayton came in, racing was loaded with hoodlums. Some tracks resembled a thieves' market, others were miniature Apalachins. Smart fugitives headed immediately for the racing strips as a haven from the law. There were 26 ringer cases the year before Drayton checked in. Hoodlums were virtually sewing up races by having three or four hides in the same heat.

Drayton flushed the crooks by requiring that all employees be fingerprinted. The lip tattoo identified horses. The nicer people in racing welcomed Drayton and his hardcore minions. The bullyboys and phonies went elsewhere.

So why among all of Drayton's constituents are only two complaining?

"There was the case in Chicago," recollected one official, in New York for the TRA meeting, "where Ben Lindheimer was violating the regulations incorporated in the TRA code of standards which prohibits an association from soliciting horses by offering to, or paying, owners, trainers or jockeys monetary inducement in any form, including expenses, other than the advertised purses or trophies."

* * *

MORI DIDN'T PROVE very cooperative when he permitted the blacklisted jockey, Bobby Martin, to ride at Garden State.

"More recently," said a jockeys' agent, "Mori wasn't exactly crazy about getting Bill Hartack and several other outstanding jockeys out of a motel, hard by Garden State Park and operated by gentleman of dubious distinction."

A telephone call to the proprietor of the motel, and old acquaintance from the fight racket, confirmed this.

"If I have to get out of the motel, I'll get out of the state," he recalled Bill Hartack saying.

And the star race rider did. He went to New York.

Democrats Clark, Byrd Feud Over Party Allegiance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., said Saturday he proposes no coercion against Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., but only asks his party allegiance as a Senate committee chairman.

"I merely ask," Clark wrote Byrd, "that you sail under the colors which fly on the Democratic masthead if you wish to be an officer of the Democratic senatorial ship

Pictures above, left to right, show the bow section of the small metal boat used by the ill-fated duck hunters. The bow section was found about 20 yards below the Clarksville dam in shallow water by volunteers dragging the area. The boat appears to have been torn in half with great force. The section was removed from the water and brought to the search headquarters on the Illinois side of the river near Pleasant Hill.

Second picture shows a group of volunteers pouring out of a boat to obtain hot coffee and food at search headquarters. Search efforts have continued despite bitter cold weather, high winds and other handicaps. All workers are donating their time for the search. The families of the missing men, with the help of donations by a number of individuals and business firms, provide hot coffee and food for the workers.

Search efforts by the skin-diving crew are being carried out above the dam in a systematic search of the old river bed. The third shot shows the base of operations—a sand barge and tow boat donated by a Louisiana Dredge firm. Most of the divers are from Springfield, although a Jacksonville man, Kenneth Wilkerson, has been on the job all week after working hours at the local Kordite plant.

Water temperature hovers just above freezing.

City Crowded With Christmas Shoppers

Jacksonville's magnetic appeal as a Western Illinois shopping center was illustrated on a huge, colorful scale Saturday as thousands came to this city to do their Christmas shopping.

Joining the throng from other communities were other thousands from the Jacksonville community, all with one purpose—to make Christmas merrier by giving something to someone.

The "second Saturday before Christmas" was on the cloudy side, but the excitement shopping and the stepped-up activities caused almost everyone to forget the weather.

Automobiles moved bumper-to-bumper at numerous times in the business district, as traffic hit one of the high peaks of the year. All parking spaces on the streets and in the three municipal parking lots were crowded. Police officers worked traffic at the main downtown crossings.

To serve the wants of the holiday crowds were scores of brightly-decorated stores and shops, stocked heavily with choice merchandise. Large staffs of helpful clerks made shopping more pleasant and convenient.

Holiday shopping will continue with a swift tempo Monday and Friday nights this week.

Extra Christmas store hours also include Saturday, Dec. 17; Monday, Dec. 19; Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Dec. 20, 21, 22, and 23, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Saturday, Dec. 24, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The regular Friday night opening will be observed.

Boat Identification Complete; Dragging Operations Increase

A growing band of persistent volunteers pressed their search further Saturday near the Clarksville, Missouri, locks and dam in an effort to learn the fate of three Jacksonville young men missing nearly two weeks in the frigid, murky waters of the giant Mississippi. Hopes were spurred shortly afternoon yesterday when volunteers probing below the dam snagged the bow section of the small aluminum boat used by the duck hunting trio. A check of serial and registration confirmed the ownership and brought strong indications that the trio drowned in the Mississippi River.

The men, who left home November 29 for the Sny area near Pleasant Hill on a duck trip, were Gary Birdsong 24; William McGath, 32; and Charles N. McGath, 27.

Search volunteers from Jacksonville, Pike county and surrounding river communities have been probing the murky depths of the river in an effort to learn the fate of the three missing men. The search area is concentrated in an area below Louisiana, Missouri.

Hopes ran high a week ago when volunteers snagged a gun case containing a shotgun and vacuum bottle, a boot and heating stove identified as property of the missing hunters on the Clarksville bend.

Nothing of consequence has been found since until the boat section was found about 20 yards below the Clarksville dam in shallow water. Dragging operations continued all day Saturday below the dam. The boat section was found at gate 13, one of several on the far end of the locks.

The search has gone under water in recent days as divers from the Springfield-Jacksonville area have gone to the river in search of the bodies. The divers as high as six in number have probed about 2,000 square feet of the river since beginning their search some time ago. The water temperature makes it more difficult than normal. Water temperature readings Saturday were just above freezing.

Workers will press the search further today.

Two more names have been added to the group of interested Jacksonville citizens who have contributed money to assist with expenses involved in the search. The employees of the Illinois Power Company have contributed $30, and Mrs. Catherine Gaudio, $5.

William Jackson Dies After Shooting At Legion Home

William (Billy) Jackson, 1001 Cox Street, was pronounced dead on arrival at Our Saviour's Hospital Saturday night following a blazing gun battle at the Moss Walton Post of the American Legion on Anna Street. Jackson was hit by two of a number of shots fired in an altercation involving at least two other parties.

Jimmie Robinson, 322 Anna Street, is suffering from minor bullet wounds received in the skirmish and police officers are seeking a third party who is believed to have been a party to the affair.

Jackson was shot apparently while not actually involved in the duel between Robinson and the third party, according to witnesses at the scene.

Coroner John B. Martin and city police officials are conducting an investigation. An inquest will be held at a later date.

The body was taken to the Cody and Son Memorial Home. Arrangements are incomplete.

Firemen Respond To 2 Alarms, 3 Fires

What started out as a double fire alarm turned into a triple affair before the firemen got back to the station Saturday afternoon.

An automobile, a house roof, and a large tar pot were involved in the activities, damage occurring at two locations.

An alarm was received at 1:45 p.m., sending the first crew to the home of Booker Johnson, 769 South Fayette street, where the roof was on fire.

First man into action was Frank Kaufmann, city mail carrier, who saw the danger and climbed on the roof with a bucket of water, with which he slowed spread of the blaze. The fire crew in charge of Assistant Chief Francis Casey used a hand extinguisher on the fire, which burned a small hole in the shingle roof.

While this crew was saving the Johnson house, the bells at the fire house sounded again, sending a second crew to 607 North Prairie street, where a 1958 Ford belonging to Margaret Benson was endangered by fire resulting from backfire. Some of the wiring was damaged.

Enroute back to the fire house, Assistant Chief Dale Bond and Fireman Bud Sullivan spied a dense curtain of smoke on the west side of the three story Applebee building at North West street and Douglas avenue, former clothing factory.

They slowed the truck and turned in West street, where a tar pot belonging to a roof repair crew was "acting up." The tar boiled over and ignited, but no damage resulted.

Timing The Budget

The change-over from an outgoing to an incoming administration involves many difficulties which seem to be inherent in the situation. But there is one matter—the making of the federal budget—where a particularly acute set of problems might be avoided through different timing.

As the national budget is now operated, it covers a fiscal year beginning July 1 and ending the following June 30. Naturally enough, the preparation of any such budget must begin almost a full year ahead. Congress takes up to six months and more to pass upon the recommendations of the president's Budget Bureau.

Inevitably, therefore, when a new administration comes in on the traditional inauguration date, January 20, it must build on and reshape budget proposals which already will have gone to Congress.

This is the problem that now confronts President-elect Kennedy, as it did President Eisenhower eight years ago.

Government and other specialists in public finance should perhaps explore the possibility of converting the budget to a calendar year basis.

One obvious disadvantage is, of course, that the new administration would be in power a full year before a budget of its own making took force. But consider how it is now:

From next January 20 to June 30, Kennedy will be operating with a budget approved by Congress under Eisenhower in the spring and summer of 1960. For the next 12 months after that, he will have a budget basically drafted by his predecessors, with some modifications by him.

There does not seem to be great advantage in this system.

On the other hand, if the budget were framed on a calendar year footing, it would put an end to the business of grafting an incoming regime's proposals onto those prepared by the outgoing administration.

To be sure, the experts would have to work at top speed the first year to get the budget in shape for passage during the normal session of Congress.

But, more and more in recent times, the lawmakers have tended to dally on money matters anyway. Often they have not finished approving appropriations when the new fiscal year starts, and special carry-over resolutions have had to be adopted to keep the government in funds.

In the long run, this plan would free Congress of the July 1 deadline it frequently fails to meet. And it would allow the new administration to draft a first budget which was not a hybrid but all its own.

Welcome Report

Some men may bewail that it's no longer a man's world, that women are "encroaching" on careers that were formerly male preserves. Maybe so, but there's one instance where this is being reversed. For the first time since the public school system was founded, men teachers outnumber women, reports the U.S. Office of Education.

This is only in secondary schools, but is indicative of a healthy trend. Not that women haven't done a magnificent job. But the entrance of more and more men into the field is bringing about an upgrading in salary and professional status—something from which we all will benefit.

Communication

Arensville, Illinois
December 6, 1960.

Jacksonville Journal Courier,
Jacksonville, Illinois,

Dear Sirs:

I am aware that much has been written about hunter-landowner relations and no doubt much more will be written in years to come, but I would like to offer a few lines in the hope that hunters will be a little more aware of what the land owner and tenant endures each year.

The first problem is the man who drives in, parks his car out of your way and pleasantly asks to hunt awhile. I have never refused permission to these and very few farmers will. The trouble is, next weekend it is very possible they will return, bringing a carload of relatives and friends, line up side by side and comb a strip a quarter of a mile wide. A rabbit has hardly a chance of running far enough to elude them. They return to the car, never offer to leave a rabbit or two, and leave you with the pleasant thought, "We'll see you next weekend."

Next is the matter of signs. If you put up signs concerning trespassing or hunting, they shoot holes in the sign and go right on across the fence. One farmer east of Arensville, who had his farm posted, was almost forced to "shoot it out" with some hunters who objected to his asking them to respect his signs.

I have some constructive ideas that will possibly make a hunter more welcome to a farmer next year. Each spring and summer a farmer is swamped with work, usually running at least fourteen hours per day. Go see the farmer where you hunt, not only in the fall but also in the spring. Ask him if he would appreciate an extra man for putting up bales, maybe cultivation, or some other farm work. At this time of year the city man is on daylight time, he could well spend some "saved daylight" by helping the farmer a little. Then maybe the farmer would feel a little better when he hears the annual fall invasion.

Sincerely,
Charles E. Ham

What's the best way to mold a genius? No formula has been found. English novelists Charlotte, Emily, and Ann Bronte were left alone. Their mother died young, and their father wasn't a pal—he enjoyed solitude. The children spent their long days in reading and composition. Charlotte, who later wrote "Jane Eyre," had produced 23 "novels" before she was 15.

Hardly the Way to Win a Point

In Hollywood

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actress Cay Forester has come up with a novel way of landing a starring role.

She wrote the screenplay—her first—for "Five Minutes to Live" and created a character that only she could play.

Cay was an up and coming actress in the movies before her marriage. Then, after marriage, she and Jane Russell helped found WAIF, an international fund-raising group for the adoption of homeless children.

As Miss Russell has also found, WAIF leaves little time for acting. Two years ago, however, Cay resumed her acting studies with drama coach Sandy Meisner.

"Then," Cay recalls, "Producer James Ellsworth showed me an outline for a television script about a typical suburban clubwoman menaced by a killer. As soon as I saw it, I knew it had possibilities as a feature film and that I could play the woman—but how to convince Mr. Ellsworth?"

She convinced him by deluging him with notes about the conception of the character. Instead of giving her the part. He hired her instead to do the screen treatment.

"After that," she says, "it was easy. I recognized myself in the woman and wrote the scenes accordingly."

She also dropped hints that she was resuming her acting career.

Ellsworth read her treatment and commented: "No one understands this woman the way you do. I want you to play her."

Said Cay: "I tried to act surprised and humble but this is exactly what I had planned for him to say."

"It was in 1939 at Shea's Buffalo Theater," said Sinatra. "At the time we were all unknowns but a year or so later, everybody hit big. I was singer with Harry James' band, Skelton was the emcee and comic on the show and the acrobat on the bill was Burt Lancaster."

Goals For Americans

Combating Juvenile Delinquency

By DR. JAMES P. DIXON Jr.
President of Antioch College

One of a series of easy-to-read condensations from chapters written by eminent American authorities for book publication by Prentice Hall with the Report from President Eisenhower's Commission on National Goals. Edited by Ray Cromley for Newspaper Enterprise Assn. (Copyright 1960, the American Assembly.)

It is important to extend the benefits of a decent standard of living and health to older people. It is far more important to the nation that we maintain a high quality of achievement for our youth.

Cases coming before juvenile courts are increasing about five times faster than the increase in number of young people 10 to 17 years of age. If the present trend continues, it has been estimated that by 1970 one boy in every five will be involved in at least one court delinquency during adolescence.

It is well to recall that in the immediate years ahead there will be more children. There is the clear likelihood that we shall have an increasing percentage of working mothers.

To the extent that reduced parental supervision is involved in delinquency, these trends suggest we may be headed for increased difficulties.

It is unlikely that we shall substantially alter the endemic nature of juvenile delinquency by financial support or welfare services directed to the needs of each child affected.

There is no certain casual relationship uniting delinquency, poverty and broken homes. Its treatment and prevention are more complex than the provision of income security at a time of unemployment.

We are dealing with a problem which calls for co-operative action by many professions, community services and organizations.

The two principal techniques presently in use to rehabilitate delinquent youth are probation services and institutional care. There is notable deficiency of trained personnel. One out of 10 juvenile probation officers has completed social work training. Six out of the 10 have no such training at all. Half of the cities in the United States above 10,000 population have no special juvenile police officer.

Much of the rehabilitative work is conducted with the machinery of criminal justice. Much of the administration of criminal justice is based upon the concept that arrest and detention are useful deterrents to further crime.

Firm and authoritarian measures in handling the individual delinquent are important. But present evidence supports the proposition that some delinquents are able with progressive assistance to make satisfactory adjustments without resorting to arrest and detention.

The school and the police are significantly involved in the identification of the individual delinquent. They must be equipped to distinguish between defiant behaviour which can be controlled without resorting to arrest and behavior which will become so severe that they will damage both the community and the youth. Our schools are particularly laggard in preparing themselves to handle this problem.

Juvenile delinquency can be defined geographically. It is increasing in suburban areas adjacent to core city areas. The rate of increase there is higher than in the central city. It would seem important to undertake a study of the patterns of change.

We cannot ignore our responsibilities in the treatment of each case. But it is unlikely that we will in this fashion substantially reduce juvenile delinquency.

In establishing our goals we must recognize that we are dealing with the whole relationship of a youth to his family, school and community. Like the process of urbanization, such a complex of factors is not easily accessible to study or planning.

Here we need to seek new knowledge aggressively. How important, for instance, is the absence of a father in a family? Should we rely more on private institutions such as churches and settlement houses? What is the effect of war? What is the effect of a predominance of women teachers?

In the end we may discover that reducing juvenile delinquency to the full extent our knowledge permits would require that we control human behavior more rigidly than we are willing to do.

We, the Women

(T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Office)

A Promise---What a Woman Makes of It

BY RUTH MILLETT

Did you read about the New York woman who bought a brand new automobile in 1950 so she could drive to California and just recently—10 years after—picked it up for the trip, which she had kept postponing year after year?

She didn't have to pay the motor company a 10-year storage bill on it, either. For, after all, they told her when she bought and paid for it that she didn't have to take the car "immediately."

I mention this little news item by way of pointing out that women have their own ways of interpreting the casual promises, half-promises, and vague commitments men make.

It behooves any man to be as exact as a lawyer in the language he uses when he is talking to a woman.

A husband, in an expansive mood, mentions to his wife that "someday" he is going to buy her a mink coat. By someday the husband means when his ship comes in.

But someday to a woman is more likely to mean right now, so the husband shouldn't be surprised if his wife grabs the newspapers and starts reading the advertisements looking for a bargain in mink.

A husband nods in casual agreemen when his wife mentions that the lawn needs mowing and from that moment until she hears the whine of the power mower his wife keeps reminding him that he "promised" to mow the lawn.

A wife says she is going to hire a carpenter to put up shelves in the kitchen and her husband says, "No need to hire a carpenter for a simple little job like that. I could do it myself in a few hours." Then he thinks his wife is nagging because she keeps asking, "When are you going to put up those shelves you promised me?"

So you've got to watch those promises and half-promises, men. Because a woman will hold you to them—and put her own interpretation on any vague term such as "not immediately" or "someday" or "when we can afford it" or "maybe."

Soviet activities in Africa, coupled with Moscow's pressures and blandishments among African leaders, threaten the very existence of the United Nations in its present form.

It is all too easy to imagine some possible results over not too long a period. The U. N., still in its teens, could become a doddering old wreck, inable of effective action. Worse than that, there is even a possibility of a sort of African Korea.

Some of the nations which supplied troops for an effort to restore peace and order in the Congo now are withdrawing them. What would happen if most withdrew the troops they had assigned to the U. N. mission? In all probability there would be attempts to fill the resulting void, and in such attempts could be the beginning of catastrophe for the heart of Africa.

The Kremlin seems to be playing a cynical game with the African continent. And there are few signs that certain African leaders suspect they are being used for the aims of Soviet world policy.

Puzzled Westerners frequently express wonder why leaders of former colonial countries often seem willing to accept Soviet propaganda and seem deliberately to close their eyes to ultimate Communist designs.

The answer probably is that the Kremlin promises something for each of them. In return, the Kremlin makes sure there is something to be gained from each of them.

Luckily for the Russians, and unfortunately for the West, some African political leaders seem more preoccupied with their own ambitions than with attempting to dissipate the shadow of calamity over the continent.

How do the Russians line up African leaders' support?

Take Gamal Abdel Nasser, for example. His Pan-Arab and Pan-Islamic ambitions involve a huge area of the continent. Nasser is anxious also to exert a commanding interest in embattled Algeria.

The Russians and Red Chinese loudly support the Algerian Nationalist revolution against France. This places the Communists and the most powerful of Arab leaders on the same side in that argument. By implication, it places the Western powers in an opposed camp. The arrangement is convenient both for the Russians and the Arab leaders.

Take the leaders of Ghana and Guinea in West Africa. They apparently are ambitious to be spokesmen for all emerging black Africa. The Russians have encouraged these ambitions and in return have won Guinean and Ghanaian support for Red maneuvers in the heart of the continent.

The Russians have done well in wooing these leaders, but they still are not satisfied. They are demanding more and more of what they call unity against "criminal plans of the imperialists in the Congo."

Should they succeed, the Russians will have reached the point where they can reduce the U. N. to a skeleton of what it is supposed to be, a tattered copy of its defunct predecessor, the League of Nations.

Planning for Two Careers Is the Trend of the Future

BY MARIE DAERR

In the future, working men and women will plan two careers, the vice president of a railroad association said the other day.

They will retire from one career and move on to the second.

This will happen, the official said, because people are living longer than they used to, and because there seems to be a trend toward earlier retirement.

The second career, he said, will avoid waste of talent and manpower.

The other day, I visited a religious book shop where a busy librarian will have her second career.

"I have 10 years of work ahead of me in the library," she told me. "But I feel it isn't too early to get my postretirement job well under way."

As a department head, this woman works a full five-day week at the library. She has hired a manager for her shop, as well as two sales people.

"I stop in at the shop each morning on my way to work and each evening on my way home," she told me. "I spend all day Saturday there.

"I also work there Monday and Thursday nights, when merchants in our town keep stores open until 9 o'clock. It isn't easy to do this. But I feel I'm laying the groundwork for what will make me very happy later on."

The shop sells not only religious books, but also Sunday school material, vestments, book marks, calendars, greeting cards and other such items.

"People used to tell me that, because of my love of books, I should be a librarian," the 70-year-old said. "I consider this the next best thing.

"I work three days a week and am on call other days. I'm constantly waiting on people who know me through my church work. Staying at home every day would be pretty dull compared to this."

A secretary not too far removed from retirement spends her spare hours making pretty ceramic objects. She has designed unusual lockets which are being snapped up by people with little girls on their gift lists.

"I can just about keep up with orders," she told me, happily. "I'm almost tempted to retire right now."

FINDING THE WAY

By RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.

Everyone can remember some absent-minded friend. I recall the professor of Greek who was accustomed to walk home after classes. On one Saturday he had been shopping with his wife. Stopping at the campus to secure a few books, he then walked home. Arriving, he wondered where his wife could be. She, poor dear, was waiting impatiently at the campus. When she phoned home, he asked, "Where have you been?" There is no record of her response.

A recent paragraph concerning the art of teaching reveals that such professors are really not absent-minded at all. At least, not about all things.

They are really quite present-minded about many things.

Here is the man who eats his fruit cup, thinks that he has had dessert, and leaves without eating his meal. He is absent-minded about food, but may be very present-minded about world economics.

This is a refreshing insight into our own lives. Everyone has sensitivities to certain things and callous indifference to others. Suddenly, because of our absorbing interest, our values change. Fright can take away from us the desire to eat. The news of a tragedy can remove our interest in some amusement.

By the same tokens, some people wander through life utterly absent-minded concerning any positive contribution to brotherhood, to community welfare, or public concern. If I have to be absent-minded about something, I'd better decide what it is to be.

Jane Addams of Chicago spotted two dirty, hungry children sitting on a curbstone. She was present-minded about them and took them home. Thus began the thrilling story of Hull House. She was present-minded about children, absent-minded about personal comforts.

The Good Samaritan in Jesus' famous parable was absent-minded about his personal schedules and willing to forego personal prejudices in order to assist a wounded Jewish neighbor. He was present-minded about an empathic love.

We live in times when there are constant barrages to distract our minds. If we aren't careful, we can forget to do many of the things which demand attention of our schedules.

Meanwhile, there is the awareness of a present-mindedness. What gets our time? What gets the major amount of our energy? What demands the absorption of our schedules? The answers to those questions reveal much of our stature as persons.

The absent-minded professor may be very present-minded about the things that are of major worth. The problem of American culture is that we should be present-minded about the things that matter most.

A New 900-Calorie Liquid Diet Swells the Flood

BY GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Food and Markets Editor

If the current craze for liquid reducing diets continues, all this year's brides will need to set up housekeeping will be a shelf of tall glasses. Knives and forks and dinner plates will be outmoded. Or maybe.

The newest 900-calorie formula diet to hit the market has a milk base, comes in vanilla and chocolate flavors, is sold in quart paper cartons available in the dairy case at your market or can be delivered to your door by your milkman. Sells for about 89 cents a quart in stores or about 95 cents delivered. Soon to be in national distribution, it is now in test markets.

Although there are only 900 calories in a quart, it supplies adequate daily amounts of essential nutrients (except calories), including protein, vitamins and minerals. The producers advise: To get full weight reducing effect of the diet, consume one quart each day with no other food intake, except low calorie vegetables for added bulk. They wisely caution the consumer to consult his physician about his health and reducing program first, especially if he plans to use the product as his sole food intake, is excessively overweight, has history of kidney, heart or blood vessel disorder, or other abnormal conditions.

It has a pleasant taste, requires no measuring and mixing, and it doesn't separate or leave sediment in the bottom of the glass.

NOTE: We asked several nutrition scientists about these new formula (bottled) diets. In general, they agree that they are nutritionally balanced. However, they all warn that a diet of only 900 calories a day for any period of time is too low for safety. No one should go on a diet of 1,000 calories a day unless under the supervision of a physician or trained dietician, they add. Reducing diets of about 1,200 calories a day for women and about 1,500 calories a day for men are the minimums recommended. However these popular 900-calorie diets do not alarm nutritionists because their clinical experience has been that few dieters stick to them long.

Tangerines, those little kid glove oranges that Santa Claus puts in stockings, point to a bountiful Christmas. This year's crop will be about 50 per cent above last year.

Yams are coming in strong now from Louisiana. Technically, a yam is just another sweet potato, but to many gourmets it is a de luxe sweet potato because of its deep orange flesh, greater weight and copper-colored skin. Quite a tasty package of essential vitamin A, incidentally.

Look for bargains this month in these plentiful foods: broiler-fryer chickens, cranberries, onions, dates and peanut products. Turkeys should stay reasonable because there is a record crop.

Bill, They're Only Worth $1 Apiece

Fur Market Ignores Inflation

By CECIL TENDICK

G. C. "Blackie" Watkins isn't sure he should have paid any attention to his friends.

He's been running a cream, poultry and egg buying station on the north side of the Petersburg square for the past 15 years, but this year's he's also buying furs.

"Cost me ten bucks for a license, and I don't know whether I'm going to come out on top or not. Maybe they saddled me with a lot of work, and I'll wind up losing money, to boot," the genial proprietor said.

"But they'd been complaining they didn't have any local place to sell their rat hides and coon skins, and so on. So I finally said, 'O.K., I'll buy the license.'

"Now they complain I don't pay high enough. They try to get me in the bind by saying, 'Blackie, you know that coon is worth $2 if it's worth a cent.' So I say, 'Take it where you can get $2.'

"Well, they hem and haw around for a coupie of minutes, and I wind up buying the thing."

'Should Be Worth More'

"Sure, they should be worth more than a buck apiece, but they're not," Blackie explained. "They weigh about 25 pounds apiece—big ones, and I've seen the day when that black one in the middle would bring $25 if he would bring a cent, but a lot of water has run down the Sangamon since 1920 or so."

After a few minutes of negotiation, McGrady walked out of the side door with three dollars and Blackie had three more coons "to contend with."

Soon he was back at his favorite chair, for it must be noted that Blackie thinks well of his friends who loaf in his establishment and has furnished it with upholstered chairs and sofas for their special comfort. These articles of furniture cannot be classified as antiques, but they're getting closer every day.

And in the meantime, they are comfortable lounging spots.

Mink Food

"I'm doing O.K. in the coon buying business, so far," he said. "I pay $1 apiece for the big ones and only 50c for the little ones, those that don't hit eight pounds. Bought so far around 300 big ones and 100 little ones. A man who has a mink ranch up at Farmington comes down every other day with his pickup and buys what I have. He skins them and stretches them, and feeds the carcass to his minks. He's trying to come out all right on the hides, and get the meat free.

"I've also bought around 300 muskrat hides, for 55c apiece. I don't think I'll be too much hurt with them, even if the market goes down a little—and there's no sign of it going up. If it just stays steady, I'll be O.K.

"I'm not taking on any skunk hides, for they'd smell up the place too much, and nobody has come in with a possum yet. But I'm not touching any mink, not at this stage of the game. The market quotes them at from $12 to $18 apiece, but I don't know a good one from a bad one. There's what they call a cotton mink, who stretches out long and looks like top money, but is worth maybe only two bucks, or even less. I may buy some mink at the tail end of the season when I get a little acquainted with the business."

Asked about the beaver situation, Blackie replied, "I doubt if anyone brings one in, but I don't figure on buying any."

At this point he had to leave his chair to candle a case of eggs, and his place was preempted by William (Art) Schroeder, who lives north of Petersburg "about two miles below the mouth of Salt Creek." He said that once he was a state motorcycle cop, "the same time Harry Doolin was. Harry's a fine man."

Plenty Of Hunters

Art asserted, "The wild life population of this area has just about hit rock bottom. Practically no quail or pheasants, but plenty of hunters. For some reason the conservation department hasn't opened up Menard county for deer hunting yet. Probably a good idea, for there would be more hunters out than deer, and if they didn't get a deer they would at least have a pretty good chance of getting a hunter."

Art went on to say that the beaver population has dwindled considerably.

"Farmers in the bottoms, and especially those in the drainage districts, certainly didn't welcome the return of the beavers. They can flood anything, and cause a lot of other damage— such as using a cornfield to build a dam. When it became lawful to trap them some men laid out a wad of money to buy some big traps. But they found out that a beaver is pretty smart, and not too easy to get into a trap. They also found out it's easier to skin a yearling steer than a beaver, and stretching the hide is a half-day's work.

"Then came the payoff, only about $3 for the hide. So the trapping enthusiasm wore off fast."

Asked why the beaver clan, under such conditions, wasn't flourishing in the Sangamon Valley, Art explained:

"Beavers are natural-born engineers, but lately they have become very careless with dynamite, especially about their lodges and dams."

The reporter said he had to leave and Blackie said:

"Come in the next time you're in town, unless I've gone broke in the fur buying business by then."

Contrary to what most people think, Spain's national pastime isn't bullfighting, it's the siesta . . . taking a nap. The Spanish day starts by opening up for business at 10 a.m. At 2 they stop for lunch . . . and a siesto . . . and come back to work about 5 or 5:30. Quitting time is 8 p.m. Or has been up 'til now. Production And Costs Jump, Prices Tumble; Farm Profits Vanish

URBANA—A revealing picture of the adjustments being made by Illinois farmers was unveiled last week by University of Illinois agricultural economists.

A. G. Mueller reported how 109 farms in a ten-county area of east-central Illinois have made changes as a result of economic and technical farming developments between the years 1951-52 and 1958-59.

The average size of these farms has risen from 287 to 321 acres, an average of 34 acres per farm. Acuually, 50 farms added acres, 49 made no change and 10 reduced acreage.

Operators on these farms have stepped up production of their high-profit crops, corn, soybeans and wheat. They have reduced oat, hay and pasture acreage. On the average, corn is up 19 acres, soybeans up 40 acres and wheat up 4 acres.

These farm operators also boosted their average crop yields. Corn yields averaged 15 bushels higher—from 72 to 87 bushels. Soybeans gained only one bushel an acre. Oat yields moved up from 44 to 54 bushels an acre. Wheat yields climbed from 27 to 37 bushels.

These highter yields were achieved in two ways, Mueller believes. Farmers on these farms boosted the fertilizer tonnage they used by 64 per cent between the two periods. Improved crop varieties and new technologies in chemical control of weeds and insects probably helped to improve yields too. Weather was probably not a factor in explaining yield increases, because soybean yields were only one bushel higher in the 1958-59 period.

Great Increase In Volume

In terms of volume of farm products on each farm, Mueller figures that crops rose 45 per cent and livestock 23 percent.

The financial picture on these farms points up the reasons why many farmers face serious income problems. Cost per farm soared $6,809, while the market value of products sold went up only $1,877, even though physical production increased 48 percent. Profits dropped $4,932 and farm family earnings averaged $2,457 less between the two periods.

Farm family expenses for living, income tax and interest payments climbed from $4,312 to $5,610, according to home account records. So, with earnings down $2,457 and living costs up $1,300, the real income of farm families in the study was about $3,757 lower than seven years earlier.

With Less Labor

Although these east-central Illinois farmers stepped up their production by an average of 48 per cent per farm, falling farm prices and rising farm costs resulted in lower profits and earning for labor, capital and management. The higher production was accomplished with no change in the amount of labor. Actually, labor dropped about one-half month per farm.

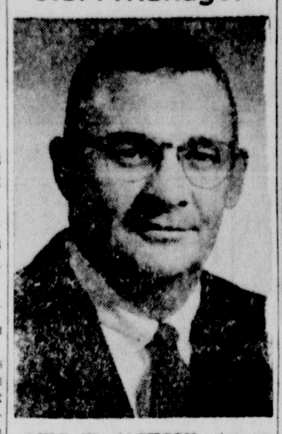
Price changes explain the less favorable financial picture between the two periods. The over-all index of prices received by Illinois farmers dropped about one-fifth. Corn prices were down 44 cents a bushel, oats 28 cents, wheat 39 cents and soybeans 82 cents. Fed cattle prices averaged $7.06 a hundred pounds less. Hogs were down $1.79 a hundredweight. Milk prices were 70 cents a hundred pounds lower, and eggs averaged 11 cents a dozen less.

Captial Requirements

In another study of 180 farms in six different areas of the state, U. of I. farm management specialists D. F. Wilken and R. B. Schwart found similar adjustments taking place. They report that the northern Illinois dairy counties and the central Illinois grain counties had the greatest drop in management returns. Southern Illinois and western Illinois livestock areas fared a little better.

The shift taking place toward increased production of high-value cash crops, hogs and beef are an attempt by farmers to maintain their financial position in a period of falling farm prices. With a high output per man needed to keep going, the future needs for capital on farms may be great. The problem of obtaining adequate credit to finance the farm business in the 1960's will be of major importance, the agricultural economists conclude.

SIBA Manager



LYLE W. JACKSON, sire analyst for the Eastern Iowa Breeders association, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has been named general manager of the Southern Illinois Breeding association, Breese, Ill. He replaces Henry A. Soborg whose resignation became effective Nov. 1.

Jackson graduated from Iowa State College with a B.S. degree in dairy husbandry. He was a member of the Iowa State dairy judging team which won first place at the National Dairy Show in 1941. At the national contest, he achieved the honor of being named the top student judge over all breeds.

Illinois Farmers Outlook Letter

BIG YIELDS OF WET CORN DEPRESS PRICE

The corn price outlook deteriorated as the harvest season progressed. Yields were larger than was expected. In many areas the moisture content of the corn remained extremely high.

The November official estimate of the 1960 corn crop was 4,379 million bushels. This was nearly 200 million more than was forecast in September and practically the same as the previous record crop produced last year.

The corn was not "soft." Late fields of corn in central and northern Illinois just did not dry properly. There were few good drying days in September and October. In some areas there were excessive rains.

Moisture contents ranging from 14½ percent to over 32 percent were reported. In some extreme cases corn that was sold brought less than 40 cents a bushel after discounts for moisture. Some buyers stopped taking corn for a time.

Many Surprised

A few farmers were disappointed with their yields. But most of them were well pleased—surprised by the high outturns.

The November estimate put the Illinois crop at 694 million bushels, 21 million more than last year. The average yield was listed at 67 bushels an acre, the same as in 1959.

Iowa did not fare so well as Illinois. Production of corn in 1960 is estimated at 775 million bushels, down 55 million from 1959. The average yield is estimated at 61 bushels an acre, down from 66 bushels last year. The Iowa crop was late and the harvest slow. Only 55 percent was reported picked by Nov. 13.

Indiana and Ohio had good crops, bigger than last year. So did the northern plains states—Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas. The Nebraska crop was outstanding, with 369 million bushels against a 10-year average of only 209 million.

Much of the 1960 crop is too wet to qualify for price support loans. And CCC has a record supply of corn, some of which is not of good keeping quality. This suggests that CCC may have to sell substantial amounts of corn in the next several months.

Free Use Expected

The 1960 crop may be used up rapidly. Poor-quality, high-moisture corn is cheap. It is fed freely and used more carelessly than higher priced, drier corn.

Total disappearance of corn in this marketing year (October through September) may equal or exceed the 4.1 billion bushels used and exported last year. If so, the net addition to the carry-over would be no more than 300 million bushels. It could be considerably less.

Recent prices for cash corn (No. 2 yellow) at Chicago were 6 cents below the December future and 18 cents less than the July future. These large differences reflected trade expectations that prices would rise more than usual during the winter and spring months.

Third In Section 13

CHARLES JOHNSON, a junior in vocational agriculture at East Pike high school in Milton, placed third in the Section 13 Pioneer corn growing contest. There were 105 youths entered in the section, which is made up of Adams, Pike, Schuyler, Brown and Pike Counties.

The seed was Pioneer 321, furnished free to contest entrants. It was planted May 12 on creek bottom land where a heavy crop of red clover had been plowed down. About five tons of barnyard manure, plus 100 pounds of triple-phosphate, 120 pounds of muriate of potash and the same of nitrogen were added to bring the land up to top fertility, as determined by soil tests.

Johnson is the sectional F.F.A. treasurer and participates in all athletics. He lives on a 136 acre farm with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Cook.

Sangamon Beef Best At International

Bruce Bergschneider, 12, of New Berlin took his 1,095 pound Angus steer, "Ace of Spades," to the International Livestock show in Chicago, entered him in the carcass contest, and came home with $4,970.

This was because Ace won the contest, both on the hoof and on the rail, by dressing out 65.9%, with a loin-eye of 13.75 square inches and the highest possible marbling score of 10. In addition to these indications of the highest possible qualities, the carcass had a fat thickness of only .73 of an inch.

This is the first time the judges clicked in the carcass contest. Outward appearances often deceive the most qualified and experienced judges; often the animal picked No. 1 on hoof ranks pretty far down the list when the carcass is judged by experts as it hangs from the rail in the cooler.

This year the first set of judges employed science to help them; they used high speed sound waves to more accurately determine the amount of fat the animal was carrying. The experiment worked —at least this time.

Bruce is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norvell Bergschneider, who live two and a half miles northwest of New Berlin. He is in the 7th grade at New Berlin junior high and belongs to the Lick Creek 4-H club which is led by Glendon Downing, assisted by Vincent Meyer and Gene C. Huffaker.

He's been in 4-H work for the past two years and had a calf project both years. Last season he had four calves. He got the winning steer last summer, when it weighed about 600 pounds, from Robert Shekelton of Waverly.

Ace proved to be a quiet animal, with much bovine dignity, and Bruce was helped along the road to the double-purple-ribbon by the suggestions of his two brothers, David and Gene, and his sister, Jeanette, all former top competitors in 4-H steer show rings.

Illinois Farm Land Up 39% In 5 Years

University of Illinois agricultural economist F. J. Reiss points out that sharply rising land prices during the past 10 years have made capital gains as important to landowners as the earnings from farmland.

Reiss also makes these observations on land values:

Current trends in the farmland market indicate that 1959 may have been the peak year in land prices.

The highest per-acre values were reported in the Chicago area of Cook, DuPage, Lake and Kane counties. Only three other counties reported average values over $500 an acre. These were Champaign, Macon and Piatt.

Values of land and buildings showed a higher percentage gain in southern Illinois than in any other part of the state outside the Chicago area. The land values in 36 counties crossed by and south of U. S. Route 40 showed a rise of 47 percent, from $103 in 1954 to $151. The average increase for the state was only 39 percent.

In the Chicago area, land values are affected primarily by non-agricultural factors. Outside this area, the 1959 average values ranged from a low of $59 an acre in Pope county to a high of $545 in Champaign county.

Values rose proportionately more in southern Illinois than in the more fertile soils in central and northern Illinois. The probable reason is the good response the less productive soils make to fertilizers, weed and insect control measures and timely use of tillage and harvesting machinery.

The larger returns obtained through use of new technology on southern Illinois soils have probably increased land values more in this area than elsewhere in the state.

Wonder World—

Strange Animals In Australia

By Rip Barnsdall

The Cuscus

The cuscus lives in parts of Australia and some of the surrounding islands. It is from one and one-half to three feet in length.

It has rather large eyes and short ears. It is a mammal (that is, it feeds its young milk).

Flying Phalanger

The phalanger lives in trees and glides about in the forests from one tree to another. It does not fly, but stretches out its limbs so that the connecting membranes are taut. It can then glide about easily.

Let's Go Birding—

The Crossbills Come Again

By Emma Mae Leonhard

Those interested in birding often guess what will be the bird highlight for the current year.

The month of November has undoubtedly held this for us for the year of 1960. A flock of at least twenty Red Crossbills was seen in and near the large Hemlocks in Diamond Grove cemetery as early as November 5.

From that time on we received word from several birders who had also found these birds feasting on the tiny cones of the Hemlocks. Birders came from Jerseyville and from Springfield to see these rare winter visitants, and they were not disappointed.

In fact these birds were not only watched as they crawled and dangled like small parrots around the outer twigs of the gracefully drooping Hemlock branches, cracking the small cones with their crossed bills and extracting the seeds; they were skilfully photographed.

The size of the flock dwindled, but the birds, as far as we know, visited the same trees every day through November 20, the last day that we checked them. It is possible that they are still feeding there.

Thanksgiving Day Feast

On Thanksgiving Day the greatest highlight of the year appeared with the Red Crossbills—a lone shy White-winged Crossbill. Although the Red Crossbill is a matter of accident as far south as Jacksonville, the White-winged is a rare accident. Six years ago, as you readers may recall, both Crossbills made Morgan County bird history in my garden.

Crossbills aren't too easy to locate in the evergreens. The greenish females seem to merge with the green of the needles. Even the colorful males—the brick red adult male red Crossbills and the rosy red White-winged—dangle so close to the twigs and under the greenery that they are hard to detect.

If a birder is patient, he will have some help when the birds fly from one tree top to another, always sounding their sharp chicklike "pip-pip." If he will learn to detect this call unlike that of any other kind of bird that we know of, and if he watches where the birds alight, he will have no difficulty in spotting the birds.

Soon they may flit out to the ends of the branches and dangle themselves in plain sight. They may choose the top of the tree or drop down to the lowest branches. A birder may stiffen his neck while watching, but why worry? His neck will recover; the birds may not return for several years.

True Story—

Long-Ago School Girl

By Mary Pence Claywell

Part 10: Dinner Time

Perhaps you are wondering about the dinner hour, my children, since there is only one room. How do you suppose the teacher and children of yesterday managed?

It seems very strange when we stop to consider this now days, yet there was no dining area. . . no cafeteria. . .no cooks. And there were no hot dog stands near-by, no cold drink machines where you could drop in a nickel or dime and cause a bottle of coke or something to slide out.

Come to think of it, few children ever carried change at all, for the simple reason, they didn't have it, and did not receive weekly or monthly allowances in those days as most of you do today. There was no place to spend it in the school anyway.

But in the one room which always seemed chock-full of boys and girls, overshoes and wraps, a teacher. . .and many more things . . .you can bet your life, there was a dinner hour. And it was a very happy one at that!

"Put away your books, and get ready for dinner, Children," Miss Jane, Edith, Mary or Ruth. . . whatever the teacher's name might be. . .would say, just as the clock hands pointed twelve. Usually it was not a minute before, and indeed, seldom a minute afterwards!

Minutes were very precious to the teacher and there was a time for all things. But no one thing was allowed to swallow up the time belonging to another, not even the dinner hour.

"Turn, rise, pass," the Teacher would say with a smile, and every eye in school turned toward a long shelf in the rear of the room where bright tin dinner pails were lined up neatly.

Christmas Program

By Mrs. Otto Dorr

Part 1: Last Practice

Today was the last practice for a Christmas Program.

Some were too timid to speak and some forgot their lines. But, with patience, Miss Emily prompted each until their part of the program was ended, and the four older pupils could prepare for their Christmas play.

Back of the curtains they arranged a little room. A table, a lamp, a rocking chair, and a cozy bed contrived with boards upon boxes stood ready.

Francis and Jennie would be two sisters, Lola, a little older would be their mother and jolly Cousin Burd must be dressed in a Santa Claus costume. His mother borrowed a great fur cap that slipped down to his eyes, a frothy white beard that reached over his ears, a bright red coat, and shining rubber boots a bit too large with a bulged sack of gifts for his part in the play.

Francis and Jennie each had new soft white robes; Francis' with small blue ribbon bows down the front, and Jennie's trimmed with little ruffles circling her neck and wrists. Warm white bed-socks were to cover their feet.

No one wore these special things for practice; they must be kept fresh and bright for tomorrow night. But the rehearsal went through perfectly in their everyday things.

How To Keep That Gear Going

By Joseph A. Smith

Part 2: What's Major Overhaul?

What does a major overhaul consist of you ask? Well let's again take that old faithful receiver as an example (the rig would be quite similar in nature.)

Unless you have some rather extensive experiences behind you, you should not attempt to make any major changes in the receiver circuit or wiring itself. Unless you know thoroughly what you're doing, you can really mess things up something awful!

But assuming you are the holder of at least a general or conditional amateur ticket, and do have some time under your belt (so to speak), you should be able to read and interpret schematic diagrams such as come with the smaller, less difficult receivers and transmitters. Naturally, you should somehow get hold of this circuit diagram of the pieces of gear in question before starting anything. You don't start down a strange road in strange territory unless you have a road map.

An excellent source of such diagrams plus pictorial diagrams to go along with said schematic is the Sams photo-fact series. They include both pictures of such gear (top view as well as bottom) and the schematic.

In these pictures, all major component parts are pointed out clearly. These might be borrowed from a radio friend and acquaintances or be bought quite inexpensively and are a wise buy.

Parts List Needed

A complete parts list is also included in such publication leaflets along with proper resistance and voltage readings. These will be helpful in checking over the gear for any troubles later on.

Also, the publication more than likely will include suggested replacement parts for any defective parts in your gear.

I must hasten to add that these Sam's photo facts are printed up solely for receivers; in so far as transmitters are concerned, if you've lost the material included with your transmitter (usually in the instruction manual) or you didn't receive one when you purchased it used, the manufacturer of said gear usually has suitable diagrams and pictorals available to the unit owner at quite reasonable cost.

Before attempting any major overhaul of that gear, be sure to get this information, pictorials, and schematic first; become thoroughly familiar with it first before touching anything.

Next week we shall go into what a major overhaul might consist of, how to limit the over-all cost, and what not to do!

Rockets And Space—

Would-Be Space Men Get 'Stress' Tests

By Walter B. Hendrickson Jr.

Part 2: Tilt Table Test

To measure the ability of the candidates' hearts to compensate for their bodies being in an unusual position for a long time each subject lay on a table tilted sharply for 25 minutes. Naturally enough this device is called a "tilt table."

The ability of the astronauts' heart and breathing to cope with low ambient (body) pressures the subject, wearing an MC-1 partial pressure suit was taken into pressure chamber. The chamber's air pressure was then reduced to that found at 65,000 feet altitude and kept that way for an hour.

Alone For Three Hours

To determine the candidate's ability to stand isolation he entered a dark soundproof room and stayed there for three hours.

The ability of the prospective astronauts to withstand extra gravity force was tested by placing each of them in a centrifuge with his couch inclined at various angles.

To find the reaction of the candidate's heart and body to extreme heat each spent two hours in a heat chamber at 130 degrees Fahrenheit.

To test the candidates' ability to stand vibrations each was seated on a chair which rotated in two directions at the same time. During these rotations he tried to keep the seat level by moving a control stick. This experiment was tried both with the candidate blindfolded and not blindfolded.

The prospective astronauts were exposed to a variety of sound frequencies (levels). This determined their susceptibility to tones of high frequency.

A FARM TOUR arranged by the Morgan County Agricultural Extension Committee showed at least three things Friday afternoon:

And the best methods do away with the scoop shovel, as automatic and semi-automatic grain handling equipment does the job fast and easily.

It's leaning against a steel tank that will hold—and preserve—more than 12,000 bushels of high moisture corn, corn too wet to keep in conventional cribs and bins. Immediately back of it is an electrically-powered auger which pulls the shelled corn out of the bottom of the tank, and into another auger which elevates it to a rubber-tired cart, which is equipped with a third auger, which will deliver the grain into self-feeders, for the enjoyment, health and development of livestock.

The next stop was at the Wilbur Zulauf farm east of Concord, where he is fattening 282 head of beef cattle with high moisture corn, hay corn and oats silage stored in two air-tight, glass-lined silos. The third photo shows a visitor as he marvels at an automatic unloading device gushing silage and grain into a conveyer which leads to a long distributing pipe that automatically "sets the table" for the steers. About 60 steers can feed at one time.

The final stop was at the Virgil Wegehoft farm northeast of Concord. He dried 11,000 bushels of corn this year and is storing it at 15% moisture, safely, and ready for either livestock feeding or the cash market. He dried about 1,000 bushels at a batch on an overnight basis, and at a cost of around 1½c per bushel for butane gas fuel and electric power. Both Andrew and Russell were extremely interested in his system; they proclaimed it something brand new to them, and said it was an idea that they were going to bring to the attention of the entire College of Agriculture staff.

After inspecting the lay-out, where a series of three augers handles the grain with speed and ease, the crowd of 100 Morgan County farmers got out of the cold wind by adjoining to Morgan Hall in Concord, where coffee and doughnuts were served during an hour-long question and answer period.

Illinois County Plans Artificial Swine Breeding

DEKALB—Illinois hog farmers in DeKalb county recently launched an artificial breeding program for swine. It's a pilot project for Illinois and one of the first in the United States.

The DeKalb County Swine Improvement Association, the county extension staff and the Northern Illinois Breeding Co-op joined forces to sponsor the program. The goal is to breed about 500 sows in 1961. Breeding is scheduled to begin in February.

According to E. E. Golden, DeKalb county farm adviser, the Northern Illinois Breeding Co-op will immediately secure several top-quality boars, and a technician will be trained to do the artificial insemination work. Members of the DeKalb County Swine Improvement Association are scheduled to solicit participation in the program.

Speaking at the organization meeting, H. G. Russell, University of Illinois livestock specialist, emphasized that hog farmers can now have the service of some of the best meat-type sires available anywhere. Other advantages listed by Russell are disease prevention, longer use of older sires and help in breed certification work. And the program could eventually give DeKalb a valuable reputation in meat-type hog production.

Illinois farmers lead the nation in soil testing, one out of every three farms having been tested in 1959, according to a University of Illinois agronomist.

Morgan Farm Bureau Will Meet Saturday

The annual meeting of the Morgan County Farm Bureau and its affiliated cooperatives will be held Saturday, Dec. 17, at MacMurray College.

The morning session will begin at 9:30 a.m. in Annie Merner chapel.

In an attempt to get a larger percentage of the membership to attend the business meetings, it has been arranged this year to offer door prizes to those present and to reserve seats for them at the luncheon to be held at McClelland dining hall.

Roy Nickel of Concord, president, will preside at the business meeting of Farm Bureau and Producers Supplies, and Albert Nienhiser, president of the Service company, will preside at its annual meeting.

Harold Neal of Downers Grove, sales manager of Country Companies—the Farm Bureau insurance group—will be the afternoon speaker. The Jacksonville High School A Capella Choir, under the direction of Ray Springs, will sing. The door prizes will be Christmas packaged meats, in furtherance of the Illinois Agricultural association's promotion of "Meat for Christmas."

Manager J. D. Bunting of the Service company announced that the usual 5% dividend on the Service Co.'s preferred stock has been paid. The dividend amounted to $18,156 and has been distributed to the 1,181 holders of preferred stock.

State Delegates To Attend AFBF Denver Meeting

Discussion of resolutions and decisions on policies to guide the American Farm Bureau Federation for 1961 will be the main business when farmers meet in Denver, Colo, Dec. 11-15 for the 42nd annual meeting of the AFBF.

Illinois' 14-man voting delegates group will be headed by William J. Kuhfuss, Mackinew livestock farmer, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association, the nation's largest general state farm organization. Boyce Moore of Jacksonville is a voting delegate.

AFBF President Charles B. Shuman will give his annual meeting talk Monday morning. Shuman, Sullivan livestock farmer, was IAA president for eight years before he became the AFBF head in 1954.

WINTER MEETING HELD BY FBFM; TO ADD MEMBERS

The annual dinner meeting of the Farm Bureau Farm Management Service was held at Grace Methodist church Tuesday evening with 68 representatives of Morgan County farm families present.

Three fieldmen of the Sangamon Valley association spoke: Charles Botterbusch of Springfield on "Closing the Year's Records;" Melvin Gehlbach of Lincoln, "Current Trends in Farm Earnings," and George Shafer of Jacksonville, "Weed Problems and Control."

A skit on the trials, and happy ending, of a farm family's appearance before a representative of the Internal Revenue bureau was presented by: Farm Family, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tomhave, Jacksonville; tax collector, Melvin Gehlbach; FBFM fieldman, Charles Botterbusch.

It was announced that at least eight and maybe ten additional Morgan County farm families will be invited to join in the management cooperative during 1961.

RURAL YOUTH PLANS CAROLLING PARTY

The Morgan County Rural Youth will meet Thursday evening for a Christmas carolling party and gift exchange.

The members will assemble at Farm Bureau hall at 7 p.m. Later they will sing traditional Christmas carols at Passavant, Our Saviour's and Oaklawn hospitals.

Even though they eat more, large cows generally give greater returns over feed costs because their production is substantially higher than that of small cows of the same breed.

Relatively good hog prices recently should foster sizable increases in the 1961 spring pig crop, but a University of Illinois economist feels that the spring crop is not likely to be excessive, even if it is 14 percent higher than last spring's crop.

FEDERATION ADDS TO YULE BASKETS

Each of the 18 members attending the December meeting of the Morgan County 4-H Federation, at Farm Bureau hall Wednesday evening, brought a Christmas present suitable for a boy or girl. The gifts were turned over to the Salvation Army to be distributed with the Christmas baskets.

Erwin Aufdenkamp spoke on "The Duties of the Public Aid Commission." Karen Smith of the Chapin Top Notchers led the recreation period and refreshments were served.

Saukees Salute Glenn Smith At Football Banquet

PITTSFIELD — The Pittsfield High school football team which won the Midwest Conference this year was honored at a father and son banquet prepared by the mothers of the football team and cheerleaders. The banquet was held Thursday evening, Dec. 6, in the gymnasium with 293 present for the turkey dinner at 6:30 p.m.

This is an annual event with the boys selecting the same menu each year, turkey and all the trimmings served family style. Guests included the boys and the cheer leaders and their dads, the Board of Education, the high school faculty and a representative from each team since 1944, when Coach Glenn Smith came to Pittsfield.

Those representatives are: 1944, Phil Casteel; 1945, Carl Riley; 1946, Albert Ransom; 1947, Clarence Richards and Bruce Peebles; 1948, Bob Kattleman; 1949, Dan McCartney; 1950, John Petty; 1951, D. D. Petty; 1952, Clinton Goodin; 1953, Bud Robertson; 1954, Curt Akin; 1955, Paul Smith; 1956, Les Allen; 1957, John Bauer; 1958, Lawrence Smith; 1959, Larry Biddle; 1960, Mike McGinnis and Richard Reed.

A. W. Schimmel, Jr. was toastmaster and Coach Smith presented the letters. Richard Heitholt, principal of Pittsfield High school, introduced the guest speaker, Clay Cooper, backfield coach at the University of Missouri, who has earned letters at Missouri in football, basketball and track and was once coached by Glenn Smith. Coach Glenn Smith was introduced by Mr. Heitholt and given special honor as this is his last year of coaching.

Coach Smith was the second of three Smith brothers who played center at the University of Missouri. He was center during 1925, 1926 and 1927.

While still coaching at Missouri he became coach at Hickman High school in Columbia. He took over a weak squad of two lettermen and four backfield men just entering high school. He coached the team to a three won, five lost record.

In his next seven years at Columbia he lost only six games. His teams were not scored upon in 27 games, and in only five games did he allow more than one touchdown. His basketball coaching record was even more outstanding.

Coach Smith moved to Edwardsville, Ill., in 1936 where he spent eight years winning 60% of his games. He coached the Quincy Blue Devils in 1943 before his success at Pittsfield High school. Among the outstanding players he has coached is Clay Cooper, the speaker at this banquet and Bob Vannatta of Memphis State.

With The Girl Scouts

Parties and special events and caroling dates mark the Girl Scout calendar for the coming weeks. Each troop is busy making gifts, tray favors for nursing homes and hospitals and planning for caroling and Christmas parties.

Leaders are asked to clear the dates for caroling through the Girl Scout office so that there will not be a duplication of times or places; also troops planning to give tray favors are asked to notify the office so that as many different hospitals and nursing homes can be visited as possible.

Two troops have already designated they will go carolling at the Christian Home in Jacksonville; favors will be taken to Our Saviour's hospital, Oak Lawn Sanatorium and the Bell nursing home.

On Wednesday, Dec. 14, members of the Board of Directors and members of the Board committees will attend a special Christmas luncheon given by Mrs. Ralph Sullivan, president, and Mrs. Robert Hartman, executive director, at Mrs. Hartman's home, 1040 West College avenue. A short Board meeting will be held following the luncheon.

Cookie Meeting

Another special meeting of great importance is one for all cookie chairmen of schools and towns in the Council area on Monday morning, Dec. 12, at 9:30 o'clock at the Scout Office. Mr. Buel Boyd of National Sales and Service, Girl Scout Cookie Sale Consultants, will be here at that time to meet with cookie sale chairmen and help plan the sale. Important decisions will be made, so please be present or send a representative.

Committee meetings were held last week according to schedule and much work for the coming year has been planned for. All members of the Membership-Nominating committee were present at the meeting last Monday evening and the slate of officers for the coming election at the annual meeting in January was prepared. There was also a full attendance at the meeting of the Camp committee Wednesday morning with camp plans progressing nicely. The theme for camp this year will be "Hawaii."

Members of the Finance committee met with the employed personnel chairman, Mrs. Charles Vieira, and with the president, Mrs. Ralph Sullivan, on Thursday at a noon meeting at Hamilton's cafe to set up contracts for the coming year.

A GOOD SIZED BITE!

WHICH SIZE IS MOST EFFICIENT?

Iowa figures show that unit costs of production go down consistently as crop acreages go up to 680 acres. Total costs vary less than 2 cents per dollar of product produced between 400 and 800 acres. Considerably higher costs are incurred on farms under 400 acres.

EAT A GOOD BREAKFAST!

FROM THE CORN CRIB!

A real estate agent was trying to sell an old farm house to a middle-aged woman. After looking the house over and listening to the agent, she said, "I could do a lot with this house."

Then she added, "On the other hand, I said the same thing the first time I looked at my husband."

MacMurray Coasts To Easy 89-64 Decision

With the reserves playing the majority of the game, Coach Bill Wall's MacMurray College Highlanders rolled to an easy 89-64 victory over Central College Friday night on the home court.

The clansmen were never in danger throughout the contest, and Coach Wall alternated two squads of reserves with his starters. All 15 Highlanders hit the scoring column in the one-sided contest.

MacMurray took the lead early, and increased it to a 47-27 halftime lead. The second half was played in great part by Junior Varsity regulars, but the Highlanders increased their lead to a 25 point margin as they won 89-64.

Balanced scoring was much in evidence again for the clansmen, with Gary Little leading the pack with 13 points, Tom Flynn counted 11, and Don McCarty added 10 to the Highlander cause. Jim Robinson and George Derrieux shared high honors for the visiting Eagles, with 11 tallies apiece.

Both teams muffed many of their chances at the charity line, with MacMurray hitting 17 of 35 attempts for 48%, and Central doing scarcely better with 16 for 32 and 50%. MacMurray hit a solid 44.5 from the field, while Central hit 34.5%.

MacMurray's record was stretched to four wins and no losses with the victory, while Central suffered their third straight defeat of the young season.

Coach Neil Williams' Junior Clansmen did not fare as well Friday as their seniors, being nipped 63-58 by the Quincy Trotters. Bruce Will and Dick Flynn, who picked up two and four points respectively in the varsity contest, led the J-V scoring with 15 and 12 points. Wall and Flynn also led the floor game for the Junior Clansmen, who showed an acute lack of rebounding. Bumbry of Quincy led the scoring for the winning cause with 14 points

Fred Arbanas, 1960 Michigan State co-captain, caught his first pass as a sophomore and his last as a senior. Both resulted in touchdowns.

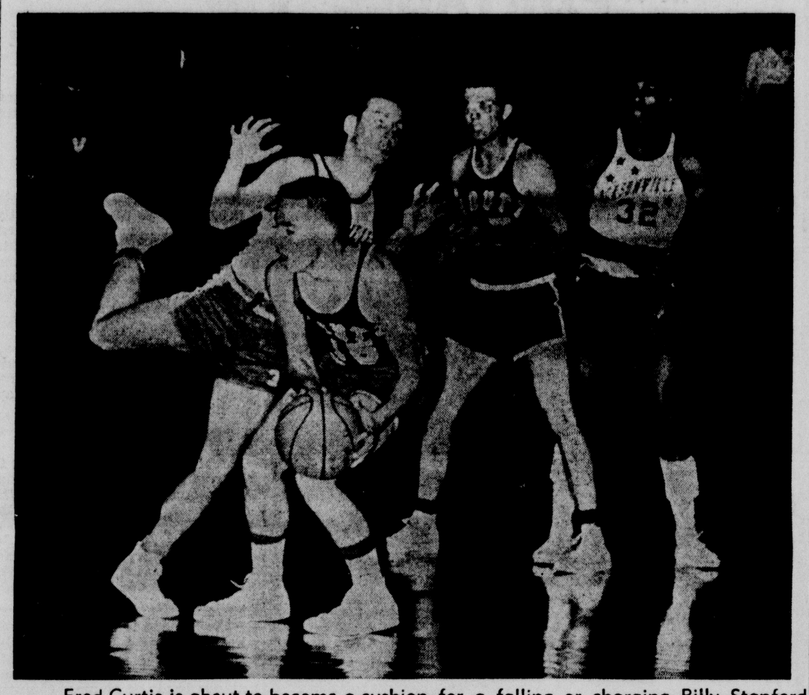
ARM SIGNALS INDICATE MIX-UP

Just which way did he go Coach John Chapman of JHS asks referee Tandy of Quincy Friday night as his Crimsons defeated Routt, 64-45. The question may not have been answered but the arm signals indicate some question of doubt. Bucky Sullivan and Fred Curtis of the Rockets appear unconcerned over the little rhubarb.

STOP ME — I'M FALLING



Fred Curtis is about to become a cushion for a falling or charging Billy Stanford Friday night in a rival intra-city clash at the JHS Bowl. The fall didn't phase Curtis as he totaled 18 points to lead Rocket scorers. Looking on are Jim Johnson of Routt and Ken Norton of the Crimsons, who racked up 20 points for game scoring laurels.

3rd Quarter Downfall Costs Rockets Their 1st Loss In Five Tilts

After a terrific comeback in the second quarter the Routt Rockets met their downfall in the third chapter and Coach John Chapman's Crimsons romped to a 64-45 decision Friday night at the JHS Bowl.

Coach Bob Winstead's Rockets connected on three of 15 shots in the initial eight minutes of play and found themselves trailing by ten at the first stopping point, 19-9. But the game losers warmed up in the second quarter to hit on eight of 14 shots with Fred Curtis showing the way with 12 points on six buckets. This rally enabled Routt to outscore the taller Crimsons, 18-9, and JHS found itself in trouble at the half with only a single point, 28-27, separating the two quintets.

The third quarter proved to be a repeat of the first quarter as the Crimsons Chip Baldwin, Bill Stanford and Gary Spangenberg fired lob-passes into the waiting arms of 6-6 Rich Sweeney and 6-3 Ken Norton, who hovered over the small and game but outmanned Rockets under the boards. The height factor gave JHS 17 points for the period to Routt's four tallies. The Winstead squad collected their only field goal in the deciding period with 2:38 remaining on a jump-attempt by Jack Lawless. Chapman's aggregation made seven of 12 shots in the frame while one of 16 attempts was the best the Rockets could muster.

Garner Early Lead

Both teams warmed up slowly, missing several first minute attempts until Ken Norton connected with 7:11 showing to give Jacksonville a 2-0 lead but Ed Carroll evened the count at 2-all with two charity tosses a minute later.

Ken Norton used his height to good advantage to draw a free throw and he promptly sank it to give Jacksonville a 3-2 lead. The Crimsons continued their surge and commanded anywhere from six to eight point lead until Chip Baldwin's counter with 21 seconds left gave them a 19-9 first period margin.

Stage Comeback

The Jacks dominated play for the opening three minutes of the second canto and enjoyed two 12-point spreads but a layup by Curtis with 4:48 showing before halftime spearheaded a Rocket comeback. Before the fireworks had subsided in which Curtis collected 12 points, Ed Carroll 4 and Bucky Sullivan two, Routt had narrowed the deficit to one point, 28-27.

Turning Point

Routt knotted the score on a charity toss by Curtis at 28-all with 6:06 remaining in the third period. JHS center Rich Sweeney then hit five consecutive points, three at the free throw line, in a minute and eight seconds to break the game wide open and give the Crimsons a 33-28 lead. Before Routt garnered its first field goal, a lapse of 5:22, Jacksonville led, 39-28. Routt lost its rebounding ace, Flip Carroll, with 4:40 left in the period and this hurt the Rocket cause.

The final period belonged to the Crimsons as did the first and third quarters and the only 20 point lead of the game came a minute after the fourth quarter got underway on a layup by sub Bill Sims, 51-31.

Norton, Sweeney and Spangenberg led Crimson scoring honors with 18, 11 and 10 points respectively. Norton hit nine of his points in the first chapter and six more in the third frame.

Coach Bob Kraushaar's JHS junior varsity claimed its first win of the season with a 50-38 win in the preliminary. Massey's 11 points topped JHS' output while Eoff and Watts hit 13 and 12 respectively.

GIAMBRA BREAKS FINGER

Giambra's manager, Mike Scanlon, said the fracture would keep his fighter out of action until late next month. Giambra scored a unanimous decision over Jones in Tuesday's 10-rounder.

Beardstown, Griffin (Springfield, Pinckneyville, Bridgeport, Harrisburg, Flora, Wood River, Herrin, West Frankfort, East Rockford, Fulton, West Rockford.

Losers of one game include Centralia, Canton, Belleville, Sterling, Moline, East Moline, Freeport, Crystal Lake, Geneva, Galesburg, Arlington Heights, Morton (Cicero), Joliet and Waukegan.

Coach Jack Renfro's Winchester Wildcats might be the dark horse entry in the Illinois Valley basketball race as the Collinsville high graduate has enjoyed fine success at the Scott County high school during his two years at that prep school.

Former Illinois Valley coaches have stepped up to better jobs including Walt Rucks, football coach at Waukegan high; Don Luketich, athletic director at Alton high; Merle Crosby, athletic director and football coach at Robinson high; Mark Dean, assistant football coach, Northern Illinois University; Jimmie Evers, athletic director and coach at Centralia high; Dick Stearns, basketball coach at Aledo high school; Ken Evitt, football coach at Rantoul high school; Alex McKnight, track and field coach at Freeport high, and Jack Jordan, football coach at Dixon high.

Better things are in store for Coach Dawdy Hawkins at Pekin high as the Chinks frosh team beat Peoria Woodruff 49-36. Pekin's varsity dropped two games to Central and Canton last weekend to open the season.

Illini Visit Colorado Monday

Probable Lineups

Illinois		Colorado
Downey	F	Charlton
Searcy	F	Mueller
Burwell	C	Voss
Small	G	Lee
Colangelo	G	Carlson

Time and Place: 9 p.m., CST, Monday, Dec. 12, Boulder, Colo.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill.—Illinois will test its new starting lineup against Colorado Monday in first road competition of the season for Coach Harry Combes' basketball hopefuls. Illini hold home court victories over Creighton and Butler.

The combination of sophomores Dave Downey, Bill Burwell, and Bill Small, and juniors Ed Searcy and Jerry Colangelo started the second half against Butler Tuesday and played so well that Combes immediately labeled them the starters for the trip west.

This quintet demonstrated plenty of rebounding, scoring, and defense during the final 20 minutes of the Butler game. With Burwell and Downey controlling rebounding, the Illini fast break worked well. Aggressive defensive work held Butler to 28 points the second half, while Illinois scored 50.

Colorado will offer a stiffer challenge to Illini than Butler or Creighton. The Buffs field a taller front line (6-6, 6-7, 6-8) than either of Illinois' first two opponents, and could cause rebounding problems for Illini.

Assistant Coach Howie Braun, who scouted Colorado's 74-65 victory over New Mexico, says the Buffs still are primarily a ball control team "although they run a little more than they did when we played them two years ago."

When drinking, the white-headed saki monkey has the curiously human trait of raising water in cupped hands to the lips, instead of bending down and lapping it up.

Marquette Ends Football, Track

Associated Press Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Marquette, the nation's largest Catholic university, dropped football and track Friday in a staggering blow to the role of intercollegiate athletics in the academic program.

The action leaving Marquette with only one major sport, basketball, touched off an angry protest by some 3,000 students who emptied classrooms and marched on downtown Milwaukee chanting "We want football — we want justice."

Faced with a recently announced fund-raising drive for $30 million in a 10-year academic expansion program, the Marquette powers decided the loss of some $50,000 on football this year was too much to take, despite a 78-year tradition as a major independent.

Track, perennially a money loser, will be abolished after the 1960-61 school year. That will enable Marquette to play host again to the Central College Conference outdoor meet, probably for the last time.

The Very Rev. Edward J. O'Donnell, president of Marquette, said in announcing abolishment of football and track that a majority of the Athletic Board voted the action because of the university's "reasonable unwillingness to accept the financial hardships imposed by these two sports in the light of the other needs of the university."

Football Coach Lisle Blackbourn, who will be paid for another year on his contract, said he believed Marquette has made "a tremendous mistake" in dropping the sport. He said the university, with 11,500 students, "should maintain not only a well rounded intramural program, but a well rounded intercollegiate program, too."

Marquette's football fortunes appeared on the way up as the Warriors won three of the first four games. However, they were hit by injuries and lost their next five outings, finishing with a 3-6 record.

WAIT TILL NEXT YEAR!—Exemplifying the feelings of youngsters throughout the country whose teams lost that last big game, a player tosses his helmet high in the air and stalks dejectedly off the field in Dubuque, Iowa. His high school team ended its season on a sour not by going down to defeat.

HIGH POCKETS—Looking like a worm's-eye view of Goliath, Carl Braun has his six feet five inches stretched into about a mile by a tricky low angle camera shot. He's now the only playing coach in the National Basketball Association after reactivating self as New York Knickerbocker.

ORIGINAL PURPOSE

Sole purpose of the U.S. Public Health Service when it was first established in 1798 was to operate hospitals for American merchant seamen.

FIRST BONDSMAN

Probation, as we understand it today, began in 1841, when a Boston cobbler, John Augustus, posted bail for a man convicted of habitual drunkenness.

Gil McDougald Discloses His Retirement

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Gil McDougald, veteran New York Yankee infielder and one of the most versatile players in baseball, disclosed his retirement Friday after 13 years in the game.

McDougald, who won't be 33 until next May, gave these reasons to The Associated Press:

"Pressure of business" and "desire to spend more time with my family."

McDougald, whom Casey Stengel once called "the best second baseman, the best third baseman and the best shortstop in the American League," had been reduced to the status of utility infielder during the last two seasons. He batted .259 in 119 games last season, hitting 8 home runs and driving in 34 runs.

He appeared in six World Series games in October and batted .278, one percentage point higher than his lifetime average.

In 10 years with the Yankees, McDougald played on eight pennant-winning and five world championship teams.

The friendly, freckle-faced California native who now lives in Tenafly, N. J., came up to the Yanks with Mickey Mantle in 1951 and won the AL rookie of the year award.

The onetime indispensable Yankee was made expendable last October when his name was included on the New York list of 15 players made available to the two new American League franchises at $75,000 apiece.

Ed Doherty, general manager of the new Washington team, and Fred Haney, general manager of the Los Angeles Angels, confided at the St. Louis baseball meetings earlier this week that Gil would be the No. 1 pick in the player selection meeting next Tuesday in Boston.

THEIR THEORY

The Nordic theory is that people of Nordic descent are the most highly developed branch of the white race and are superior biologically, intellectually and morally to all other races.

Dartmouth's football team held nine rivals to 66 points this season yet lost four of nine games.

Junior Choir To Perform For CWF Dec. 14

The Christian Women's Fellowship of Central Christian Church will have their Christmas meeting in Fellowship Hall Wednesday, Dec. 14, at 7:30 p.m. (the executive committee meeting at 6:20 p.m.).

The Junior Choir is to be featured at this meeting, under the direction of Mrs. Jack Gillespie, with Mrs. Francis Plouer at the piano. They will bring "The Christmas Story" in a traditional Yuletide setting.

The Keyes group, led by Mrs. J W. Cully, will have charge of the Silver Tea. This is the occasion for the annual "Cookie Swap"—a time when every woman brings her favorite cookies (and a few recipes, too, for they are usually called for after the sampling gets under way).

There is always an abundance of cookies and later the women will take cookies to The Christian Home and to other shut-ins of the church.

Goalby Snares Coral Gables Open Lead

By WHITNEY MARTIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Bob Goalby shot his second consecutive four-under-par 67 over the Biltmore golf course Friday for a 134 total and a one stroke lead at the halfway point in the $20,000 Coral Gables Open tournament.

The husky young pro, playing out of Crystal River, Fla., came in late with his fine score to edge out two earlier finishers—Henry Williams Jr. of Fleetwood, Pa., and Wes Ellis Jr. of West Caldwell, N.J. Williams had a 66 Friday to add to a first-round 69 and Ellis had rounds of 68 and 67.

The first-round leader with 65, John Barnum of Grand Rapids, Mich., had 40 for his first nine Friday. Although he rallied on the second nine he finished with a 74 and in a deadlock with four others in the 139 bracket.

Ted Kroll of Fort Lauderdale, shot a second 68 Friday to be alone at 136. Jim Turnesa of Rye, N.Y.; Marty Furgol of Lemont, Ill., and Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla., were deadlocked at 137.

Sam Snead of Boca Raton, Fla., was in a six-way tie at 138, and Johnny Pott of Shreveport, La., winner of the West Palm Beach Open last Sunday, was in a multiple tie at 140.

There were 36 golfers under par for the two rounds. A score of 144 was necessary to qualify for the final two rounds.

Testifies Carbo Owns 52 Per Cent Of Liston's Pact

WASHINGTON (AP)—A St. Louis police lieutenant testified Friday that imprisoned hoodlum Frankie Carbo owns 52 per cent of the contract of ranking heavyweight boxer Sonny Liston.

Lt. Joseph Kuda told the Senate Antimonopoly subcommittee he also had found that Philadelphia racketeer Frank (Blinky) Palermo owns 12 per cent, John J. Vitale of St. Louis another 12 per cent, and the remaining 24 per cent is owned by others.

Kuda was summoned after Vitale and Frank Mitchell, publisher of a weekly newspaper in St. Louis, both invoked the Fifth Amendment in refusing to say whether mobsters are behind Liston.

Vitale and Mitchell—who a subcommittee lawyer indicated have extensive police records — were threatened with citation for contempt of Congress.

It was the first time witnesses have balked at answering questions since the subcommittee reopened its hearings on gangland influence in the ring business.

Onetime bigshot fight promoter James D. Norris earlier told the subcommittee behind closed doors that Carbo was "especially helpful" in lining up fighters Jake LaMotta, Carmen Basilio and Tony DeMarco for matches sponsored by Norris' International Boxing Clubs.

At the same session, Norris—who controlled the clubs of New York and Chicago before they disbanded last year—said that eight years ago he offered FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover a 10-year, million-dollar job cleaning up boxing. He said Hoover rejected the offer, made through columnist Walter Winchell as intermediary. The FBI declined comment.

Liston's manager of record is Joseph (Pep) Barone of Allentown, Pa. Barone is under subpoena to testify, but is reported ill in an Allentown hospital.

Most people will answer "Yes" almost immediately. They will see that all South has to do is to let East hold the first trick with the queen of spades and eventually South will wind up with one spade, two hearts and three tricks each in diamonds and clubs for a total of nine.

It never pays to answer such questions too quickly, because actually there is a defense to beat three no-trump. Here it is:

East leads a spade at trick two: West wins with the ace and leads a third spade on which East discards the ace of diamonds.

This makes South's king and queen of diamonds good, but before he can get that all important third diamond trick, he will have to let West in with the jack and West's last two spades will set the hand. Incidentally, once you have had your fun with this problem as is, you can shift the East and West hearts and clubs around so that South will be able to end play West in hearts and make him lead from his jack of diamonds to give South his contract against and defense.

XXXVI

Shaking her head at herself sorrowfully, she told him that at first she expected Dr. Whiting, the educated Herr Professor, to handle the situation. When the police returned to question the tenants, she had joined them in their ignorance of the crime. The police presumed that the sound of the shot was muffled by noise from the party next door, which had grown in volume as the night wore on. Mrs. Schmidt did not tell them otherwise. For now, added to her previous terrors, was the belief that, had she acted at once, she might have saved Antonia's life. Then, as day after day passed, she grew more terrified than ever. Having failed in her duty, might not she, too, be placed under arrest?

"Each day I say: 'Today I go to the police.' But I could not. I was afraid." Her eyes filled with tears.

Cliff had patted her on the shoulder, helped her on with her coat and driven her to the White Plains' police station, staying at her side while she made her statement and remaining until Brick Czernowski was brought in for her identification.

Brick, Cliff said, was the product of a broken home. He had quit school early to hold a succession of odd jobs from most of which he was fired before Sunbeam hired him. The complaints had swelled during the rain and the steam of early August, and when Janet had gone to get her purse that afternoon, leaving him alone in the kitchen, he had spied the gun. On impulse, he had reached up and taken it, hiding it in the pocket of his jacket.

"When you threatened to report him, Mrs. Hamilton, he saw red."

Janet put hand to her mouth, slowly remembering the steamy hot day, the rain, the telephone quarrel with Jason, the boys' fighting and the $20 bill. Her words returned: "You'd better mind your manners or I'll report you. . . ."

Cliff said that Brick drove back in his souped-up old car, planning some sort of destruction to Janet's property in revenge. He parked his car on the road. Behind the garage he discovered the bow and arrows that Johnny and Bruce had been playing with when he'd made his delivery. He remembered talking with the boys, surprised to find them in possession of so lethal a weapon.

"Bow and arrows?" Jason interrupted, bewildered.

"Oh, darling, don't you remember? You bought the boys that set."

"But that was a toy," Jason protested.

"Not this one," Cliff answered for Janet.

* * *

Brick had watched Janet. When she stood up, the bow and arrow were in his hands, and he drew the bow, surprised himself, as the arrow sailed close to her head. Junior had charged at him, and he hotfooted it back to his car.

"Why didn't you call the police?" Marian interjected.

"I—I started to. But this was before——"

Marian grinned wickedly.

Several days later, Cliff said, Brick went to Mrs. Whiting's, although it wasn't his regular route. When he reported in at the cleaning plant afterward, Johnson smelled beer on his breath and fired him. He went to the Whiting apartment building and hung around in the street until he saw Dr. Whiting come out and drive away. Then he climbed the stairs to 5A.

"How simple," Gene said. "And no one suspected him until you talked to Mrs. Schmidt?"

"No. Mrs. Hamilton did call me after she'd seen Dr. Whiting in prison. Gerry and I came over here. I promised I'd see what I could do. We made out a list of possible suspects, but I'm afraid I didn't put much stock in it."

"Brick was on that list," Cliff went on and told how Mrs. Hamilton had found out that Brick had delivered to the Whiting apartment for several weeks. Shortly after she left, Brick came in and begged for his job back. Johnson was nearly beside himself with the holiday rush and took him on. He also made some joking reference to Mrs. Hamilton's inquiry and of course that scared him. He told Johnson he'd report for duty the next morning and then beat it up here.

* * *

Brick had found the house empty and had entered it. He had gone to the basement, Junior at his heels. He had knocked the dog out with a baseball bat, and it was when Cliff searched the basement later on that Junior, revived by that time, followed him upstairs. Brick waited patiently until the boys were in bed. A 10-year-old boy, like Johnny could have proved difficult.

"And then you caught on and called me, Mrs. Hamilton," Cliff said.

"It was the footprints in the snow," Janet said. She described them and shivered again at the memory. "But it started to rain heavily so that by the time you looked, Cliff, they were gone."

"Now I've got to get home," Cliff said. "Gerry'll be mad if I ruin her dinner. I'm sorry I didn't believe you, Mrs. Hamilton. But it did sound queer, your story. . . ."

"Not to me it didn't," Janet smiled, seeing him to the door.

Big 10 Athletic Directors Given Power To Enforce, Punish Recruiting Violators

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP)—The power of enforcement and punitive judgment in cases of recruiting violations Friday was switched by the Big Ten from the commissioner to athletic directors.

It was the greatest upheaval along organizational lines in the conference since 1950 when Commissioner K. L. (Tug) Wilson was made, in effect, the judge and jury of the recruiting code.

The move, started by both faculty representatives and athletic directors, was received with somewhat a sigh of relief from all quarters.

There was some criticism, circulating the complete range from football coaches up through faculty representatives, when Wilson ruled Indiana ineligible for the 1960 Big Ten football championship and ruled that its games as well as those of its opponents would not count in the standings.

At the time of the ruling, made as a punitive measure for recruiting infractions, Biggie Munn of Michigan State reportedly accused Wilson of legislating not only against Indiana but also Michigan State.

The Spartans had a six-game conference football schedule with Indiana included on it. With the Hoosiers relegated to a "no-count" status, it left only five conference games—a delicate situation in which one loss could knock the Spartans out of the championship.

Wilson, under the near absolute power vested in him, was under considerable stress in making the Indiana decision and he did so in the best of faith. Indiana never applied its perogative of appealing his decision to faculty representatives.

Under the proposal enacted Friday, the commissioner's power was diluted this way:

"The commissioner shall make a full report of his findings (after investigation of infractions) to the directors of athletics together with his recommendation. The directors shall determine whether a violation is found to have occurred.

"The directors shall afford the institution, employee or student involved a further opportunity to appear and be heard. The director of athletics of the institution against which allegations have been made shall not vote in such proceedings."

The decision of the directors is to be final unless an appeal is made to the faculty representatives, who are empowered to mete out a penalty.

Also, a faculty representative or an athletic director may request like officials at another member institution to investigate within their institution alleged violations of conference rules.

In other words, Big Ten schools can blow the whistle on each other in private regarding alleged recruiting malpractice and if not satisfied can lodge a formal complaint.

As to transferring punitive powers to the directors, Wilson said:

"The commissioner never had a sounding board before. He was out on a limb. And nobody was talking to you."

Duke Maas won five games for the 1960 Yankees. Three of his victories came the final week of the campaign.

In Hollywood

BY BOB THOMAS

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Brett Maverick loped off the Warner range. So did Cheyenne, Kookie and others from time to time. But Stuart Bailey always stuck to his office at 77 Sunset Strip.

This may be a lesson in how to deal with feudalistic studios. Bailey, known off the TV tube as Efrem Zimbalist Jr., is now doing a prize role in a bigtime movie, "By Love Possessed," while his fellow stars are still fighting it out in the courts or in their series.

"Simple," he replied. "I simply gave the studio four years of my life."

During that time, he worked almost continuously and uncomplainingly in the Friday night whodunit. "I didn't see any good in complaining," he reasoned. "Besides, I like Jack Warner."

Zimbalist admitted there were times when he might have gotten restless. While he was grinding out the TV hours, other studios sought his services in feature films.

"But what did I miss?" he asked. "I missed 'Butterfield 8,' but I'm not sure that would have done me good. 'Portrait in Black' didn't turn out too well. It was the same with most of the other pictures I could have done."

He is obviously pleased with "By Love Possessed," as well he should be. The James Gould Cozzens novel has been expensively cast with Zimbalist as the small town lawyer and costars Lana Turner, Jason Robards Jr., George Hamilton, Susan Kohner, Barbara Bel Geddes, Thomas Mitchell.

"I go right back to '77 Sunset Strip,'" he reported. "I'll have six more shows this season in which I play the major role, plus a lot of others in which I do bits and pieces.

"I don't mind. The show has been good for me. This year we have more help (Richard Long has been added to sleuths Zimbalist, Roger Smith, Edd Byrnes), so I'm able to do a feature now and then. That's one of the concessions they gave me. And that's another reason I'm glad I've never raised a fuss with the studio."

Lecturer To Discuss Famous Religious Marvel Dec. 12

A lecture on a widely discussed religious marvel of modern times, the stigmata of Padre Pio, will be delivered at the Church of Our Saviour Monday evening at eight. The speaker, the Rev. L. Chiuminatto, S.J. of St. Louis, is the national director of the laymen's retreat league which numbers a half million Catholic annual retreatants throughout the country.

The Jesuit lecturer will describe the case of Padre Pio, the Capuchin monk now living in the monastery of Our Lady of Grace, San Giovanni Rotondo, Italy. Born Francesco Forgione on May 25, 1887, he entered the Capuchin order in 1902 and took the name Pius. He was ordained on August 10, 1910 and on September 20, 1918 first experienced the phenomenon of periodic bleeding from wounds resembling those of Christ in his side, hands and feet. His side wound is shaped like an inverted cross while the wounds in his palms completely pierce his hands. The wounds in his feet appear wider at the top.

Father Chiuminatto visited Padre Pio in 1956 and assisted at the altar during his mass at which the unusual bleeding most frequently occurs. Padre Pio is known to spend many hours each day in the confessional where thousands of pilgrims seek his advice every year.

Various doctors have attempted to heal him but the wounds have never closed nor have the accompanying pains been alleviated.

Modern physiologists, Catholics among them, maintain that such wounds might be produced from purely natural causes and the stigmata is not considered by the Holy See to be an incontestable miracle. Several Catholic canonized saints, however, have borne these marks, among them Ste. Francis of Assisi, Catherine of Siena and Rita of Cascia.

The Altar and Rosary Society of the local Catholic parish is sponsoring the lecture to which the public is cordially invited.

Jacksonville businessman, F. R. Rawlings receives the Silver Beaver award from Olen Gotschall. It is the highest award conferred by a local Boy Scout council, and is given for long years of service in Scouting and other civic service. At 29 A. Lubbers Is Youngest College President In Nation

PELLA, Iowa (AP)—"The object of my whole existence is to help young people, both spiritually and intellectually."

He is literally following in the footsteps of his father, Dr. Irwin J. Lubbers, 64, now president of Hope College at Holland, Mich. The elder Lubbers served as president of Central from 1934 until 1945.

"I was teaching history at Wittenburg University (in Springfield, Ohio), having a wonderful time and planning to stay," he recalls.

Then, he says, he received a letter from Central President Dr. G. I. Vander Lught, asking him to come to the college as vice president. So Lubbers returned to Central—this time with his wife, Eunice, and their three children, Don, 6, John, 3, and Mary, 1.

Vander Lught resigned last March. A committee of trustees, faculty members and alumni recommend Lubbers to the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees as new president.

There was some doubt whether he would be accepted, Lubbers says, mainly because of his age.

"They were afraid of having an inexperienced college administrator, that I was too young to handle the job.

But youth, Lubbers feels, is incidental to the real issue and to the challenge which now lies before him.

"The qualities of the man and what he stands for are the factors that really count," he says.

Central was founded by the Baptist Church in 1853. In 1916 the Dutch Reformed Church, which also supports Hope College, took over its administration. Lubbers, who is of Dutch-French Hugenot ancestry, is the 17th president of Central since its founding.

A new $18,000 chemistry research laboratory is being planned. A foreign study program has been inaugurated. A course in Russian language opened for the first time this fall. An on-campus research fund has been established to help faculty members and students who wish to undertake special projects in the sciences.

Waverly Legion Auxiliary Gives Books To Library

WAVERLY—The Waverly American Legion Auxiliary Unit 262 entertained members and their families at potluck supper at the regular meeting time Tuesday evening, Dec. 6th, in the Legion Hall. There were 40 present. The social and rehabilitation committees were in charge.

Following the meal the Junior members of the Unit presented a program, clarinet and sax duet of familiar Christmas music, Shirley Ann and Judy Stewart; piano solos, Connie and Linda McClain and Linda Ashbaugh; song and dance number, Nancy Hartman.

Announcement was made of the need for good playing cards to be sent to veterans wards at Jacksonville State Hospital. The Junior Chairman reported at the regular meeting of the group, the previous Saturday, members had made 85 holiday tray favors.

It was voted to purchase the following books, Hawaii, 50th State and Tourist In Africa, to be placed in the Waverly Public Library, in tribute to late memmers, Mrs. Allyn and Mrs. Pollitt.

The card and flower committee reported flowers sent to three members ill in the hospital. The next meeting of the Unit will be Jan. 3rd with the legislative and national security as the program theme.
